Marriage Bells at Eldorado

HOLMES—BRONSON

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bronson, of Upland Villa, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday evening, October 23rd, when their youngest daughter, Carrie Gertrude, was united in the bonds of matrimony to Mr. Charles Henry Holmes, of Meadow Vale, Eldorado.

A few minutes after seven o'clock, while the strains of the wedding march broke the silence of the evening at the command of Mrs. John Holmes, who presided at the organ, the bridal party entered the parlor and took their place beneath a beautiful arch of evergreens and lace, from the centre of which was suspended a large, white wedding bell. The bride was fittingly attired in a beautiful gown of rich cream ladies' cloth, trimmed with white satin, and carried in her hand a bouquet of ferns and white phlox. She was attended by Miss Holmes, sister of the groom, who wore a pretty gown of light blue voile trimmed with silk, and carried a bouquet similar to that of the bride. The groom was supported by Mr. Wm. Bronson, of Cordova. The beautiful and impressive ceremony of the Methodist church was performed by Rev. G. E. Ross, pastor of the circuit.

After congratulations, about seventy guests repaired to the dining hall, where a neat and sumptuous wedding supper was served and much enjoyed by all. Mr. and Mrs. Bronson contributing largely, by their good cheer, to the pleasure of their guests.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents, that from the groom being a set of furs. The groom presented the bridesmaid with a gold brooch, the organist with a gold pin and a similar gift to the groomsman.

The bride travelled in a neat suit of blue serge with hat to match.

The happy young people visited the city of Peterboro and on their return will reside at Eldorado, where they are highly respected. We wish them a long and happy life.

Good Roads and Highways

Commissioners' Meeting in Belleville

A session of the Good Roads and Highways Commission was held in Shire Hall, Belleville, on Tuesday for the purpose of hearing the opinions of delegates from the counties of Frontenac, Lennox and Addington, Durham and Northumberland, Hastings and Prince Edward and the cities of Peterboro and Belleville. The Commission was composed of Chairman Mr. C. A. McGrath, government engineer, Mr. A. H. McLean and Mr. A. Rankin, M.P.P. There was a fair number of representatives present.

The opinion of the meeting was that we should have better roads; that the Provinces should receive more financial assistance from the Federal Government; that the first roads to be improved should be the highways connecting the producer with his market town; that statute labor should be abolished; that the Colonization Road Act should continue in force, that the monies voted by the Federal Government should be administered by the provinces; and that the term of municipal officers should be extended to periods of at least three years.

The opinion of the representatives of Hastings county on the good roads question may be gathered from the following recommendation of a committee of the County Council presented by Mr. R. Vermilyea, President of the Good Roads Association, and signed by Mr. T. H. Thompson, Warden of the county.

"That legislation be passed prohibiting the manufacture of new vehicles and the renewal of old ones carrying 1500 lbs. or over at a less width than 4 inches, and five years only be allowed for changing to the same width the tires of existing vehicles of similar capacity.

"That a tax of 50 cents per horse power be imposed in lieu of the existing license fee upon all autos up to and including twenty horse power; 75 cents per horse power on autos above 20 horse power and up to and including those of 30 horse power; $1 per horse power upon all autos above 30 horse power and that the money so raised be applied for highway improvement. That expenditures hereafter upon all county roads and bridges shall be borne one-third by the county in which they are situated and two-thirds by the Government of the Province.

"That it is of supreme importance that the cost of maintenance should be borne in the same proportions as the cost of construction by the county and province respectively.

"That as we consider county roads should be constructed in such places only as will be in the general interest, we are opposed to a frontage tax.

"That the highway connecting the producer with the producer's market receive first consieration and that such roads be selected where the council at each county shall approve."

Arm Squeezed Out Youth Dies of Shock

His right arm squeezed from its socket when he fell beneath a train yesterday morning, Harold Williams, of Gananoque, died of shock six hours later in the General Hospital, Belleville.

Williams, a youth of about eighteen years, had come up from Gananoque last Wednesday, and spent the intervening time in that city. On Saturday morning he and two chums went to the east end of the Grand Trunk yard, and it is thought boarded a freight leaving there. At a cut about six miles down they apparently got off and waited for another train. Williams attempted to board the train, succeeding in catching a bar, but missed his footing. He again tried to secure his footing and, having recovered his equilibrium, evidently attempted to raise himself up, with the result that he fell. His right arm came between the car wheel and the rail, and was squeezed out.

A section gang brought the unconscious youth to the station in Belleville, when he was removed to the hospital. An operation was performed by Dr. W. J. Gibson. The youth, however, never regained consciousness, and died about 3.30 p.m. Dr. Boyce has opened an inquest. The remains were sent to his home.

Look to Canada For Army Horses

The Canadian Gazette, London, which generally has a good line on Imperial affairs, has the following account of a luncheon at the Savoy Hotel, at which the question of war horses from Canada was discussed in a friendly way:

"A mid-day party at the Savoy Hotel brought reminders of the newer intimacy of Canada and the Motherland, in pursuit of common ends and in defence of common interests. Much was said at the luncheon of the possibilities of useful co-operation between the Army Remount Department of the British Army and horse-breeders in every Canadian Province working through the National Bureau. Canada is destined to be a main source of supply for the British Army.

Sir Edward Ward wished the bureau success, and promised to do everything possible to help the good work."

Take Time by the Forelock

Do not wait until next month, or next spring, or next fall, to begin your advertising. Begin to-day. While you are waiting some other store is advertising and getting the trade that should be yours.

In busy times you must strike because the iron is hot. In dull times you must advertise to keep the iron hot. "The time to advertise is all the time," as a successful business man has said:—"The money you invest in advertising in the best newspaper is business insurance—insurance against loss of trade."

"Hints" to Emigrants Must Avoid Criticism

Amongst a number of useful hints to emigrants contained in a circular issued by the Emigrants' Information Office, the official department for emigration at London, there occurs the following:—

"Remember that Canada is a great Dominion, with long settled laws, habits and customs, which are not to be changed at the bidding of every new arrival. When you have been a little while in Canada you will value them also.

"Every country has its own methods of work, and in Canada you will often find the arrangement of the workshop or the farm, and the tools you will use, different from those at home. You will soon accustom yourself to the change if you try.

"Do not, above all things, try to impress on your Canadian employer how much better we do things in England, for it will only make him dislike you, and perhaps not care to keep you in his employ. Canadians, too, often resent criticism of their country or its methods, but you should remember that they have been working in Canada long before you were born, and that they are more likely than a stranger like yourself to know what suits that country best."

Her Great Love;

Or, A Struggle For a Heart

CHAPTER XXIV—(Continued).

She rose, drawn to her feet by the stress of his emotion and hers, answering to it.

"No," her lips formed.

He drew a long breath.

"Then—then why—" He stopped as if the words choked him.

She stood downcast and trembling.

"He—he helped us. We should have been penniless—Bobby—"

He saw it all in an instant.

"My goodness!" broke from his strained lips. "Child!"—he caught her in an iron grip—"do you know—realise—what it is you are doing? Marry Mershon! You!"

His grasp hurt her; but she made no attempt to release her arm as she looked up at him piteously and with faint surprise.

"Why—why are you so angry with me?" she faltered. "How could I help it? He said that if—if I married him he would pay the money, and—and help Bobby. And—and I said 'Yes,' at last. I could not have taken the money from him without— He would not have given it, and—and it does not matter what becomes of me so that they are safe and—and happy."

His grasp tightened and she winced; but he was unconscious of the pain he was inflicting. His own agony was too great. The thought that she was to be the wife of another man—and that man Mershon!—was rending his heart in twain; every nerve was stretched and strained on a rack. And her admission that she did not love the man increased the torture.

She looked up at him, at his set face and gleaming eyes, with a questioning terror.

"Why—why are you so angry; why do you curse so?" she faltered.

A shudder ran through him, and the set rigidity of his face relaxed, melted, so to speak.

"My goodness, child, don't you know?" he said, hoarsely.

In her innocence she drew a little nearer to him.

"It is because you—you like me, because we have been such friends that you are so sorry for me?" she said. "Perhaps—"

She stopped and smiled, a woeful little smile.

"Go on! Speak from your heart; hide nothing from me!" he commanded, imperiously, hoarsely.

"Perhaps if I had come to you and—and told you of our trouble you would have married me," she said, simply. "I think you like me, Lord Gaunt. And I could not have taken the money unless—unless I had been your wife, could I?"

A groan broke from his white lips. Fate was too many for him. He had fled from Temptation, but Temptation in "fleet of foot, and it had overtaken him and had got him under its heel.

"Child!" he said in a slow, thick voice, "don't you know? Haven't you seen? Can you not guess? I love you!"

She shrank—for even in him passion startled and awed her.

"You love—"

"I love you!" His voice broke on hers fiercely. "I love you, Decima. I have loved you from the beginning. No man ever loved any woman as I love you. You are the life of my life, the soul of my soul. Every thought is of you. You hold my heart in the hollow of your hands. It was because I loved you passionately, madly, that I left you, fled from you!"

Lord Gaunt stopped for breath, and caught Decima's other hand and gripped it fast, as if he feared she would be torn from him there and then.

Decima stood quite still. She did not shrink from him; she was too overwhelmed by the storm of his passion to realise the meaning of his words. Then slowly it came crushing down upon her, caught her as if in an embrace, enveloped her like a sun-warmed cloud.

Her heart leaped, then beat heavily; a joy beyond the power of poor mortal words to limn, suffused her.

All in an instant a veil seemed to have been torn asunder, and she saw and knew what love meant; and that her love, with all it meant, had been given to him long, long ago. The pain of his grasp became an ecstasy. She could have lauched aloud in her new-born joy, delight. But all she did was to gaze up at him as the devotee gazes upward at his god, the god which had power to deal out misery or joy unspeakable.

"You—love—me!" she said, unconsciously.

Her voice thrilled through him, and dispelled the last remnant of honor that clung to him despairingly.

"I love you!" he said. "You are just life to me! Decima, if you had not been as innocent as a child, you would have known it! Think, look back! Do you remember nothing? have you seen nothing? Why was I always with you—why did I stay at Leafmore—why did I do all, everything you wanted? Do men act like that unless they are in love? See!" He thrust his hand in his bosom and dragged out the ribbon which had fallen from her hair. "I have worn this next my heart day and night. Sleeping or waking, it has never left me. You had worn it."

The blood rushed to her face, her eyes glowed with a pure passion, and she drew still nearer to him.

His arm went round her waist, and he crushed her against his heart, and for the last time—the first time—his lips sought hers and kissed her.

She did not shrink, but lay in his embrace, her face upturned, flower-like, to his kisses.

"You are the whole wide world to me!" he said, hoarsely. "Life is not worth having without you. I can not live without you. I thought I could. I have tried—you see, you know—I can not, Decima, child, my dearest, tell me! Tell me! Do you love me?"

She looked up at him, and the look sent a thrill over him. Her lips parted, but for a moment no words would come. Then she said, in a faint whisper which thrilled him:

"I love you!"

She hid her face against his heart for a moment, then she raised her eyes to his.

"Yes; I know now! How—how stupid—how ignorant I was! I—I must have loved you all through—from the very first!"

He bent and kissed her hair passionately yet reverently. Her avowal of love awed him. It was as if he had suddenly penetrated the sanctum sanctorum, the holy of holies of some shrine. Her innocence cried aloud to him.

But his passion deafened him.

"Decima, since the day we met at Leafmore, I have loved you. Day by day that love has grown until it has become the master-passion of my life. I have struggled with and fought against it, but Fate and circumstances have been too many for me. You know the truth now, and—and I am not sorry."

"Sorry! Why should you be?" she said; and love lent a sweeter music to her voice, so that he paused and listened before replying.

"I am not sorry! For us nothing matters, nothing is of consequence, but our love. Nothing, no none, shall separate us, Decima!"

She smiled up at him, and her hand stole to his face with a womanly touch which thrilled him.

"No!" she said. Then she started. "But—but Mr. Mershon! I have given my word—my promise!" Her face grew grave and fearful. Gaunt laughed slowly—a laugh of scorn and defiance.

"A word wrung from you—cozened by an artful scheme!" he said. "What does it amount to? He—he bought, bribed you! Bah! I buy, bribe you. I'll do all he offered." He laughed, and pressed her to him. "And I buy with love, love, love! My child, do you know now what you were about to do—to marry a man you did not love?"

"Yes," she said, and a shudder shook her, so that she clung tighter to him. "I know now! Oh, how could I?"

"How could you!" he exclaimed, with a desperate, reckless laugh. "But that is all over, finished with, dearest. It is I—I whom you love! Are you glad, Decima? Tell me!"

She drew a long breath. He was smoothing the tendrils of her soft hair from her forehead, was looking into her eyes with the hungry, craving look of love.

"I am glad," she responded, with innocent abandon.

"That is right!" he said. "And you shall never regret it, dearest—never! While I live, I will spend every hour in making you happy. You believe that—you trust me?"

"Yes," she breathed. "But think! Am I fit to be your wife?"

The word fell like a bolt from the blue. His wife! His face went white. But she went on all innocently:

"You—you are so—so far above me. I am only Decima Deane."

He laughed as he thrust the gruesome spectre of his past, of his bonds, away from him.

"You are, yes, Decima Deane—the girl I love, the one woman in the world to me. Oh, my darling—my darling!" His voice broke. "Decima, tell me, am I awake or dreaming?"

She raised her head from the pillow of his breast, and kissed him on the lips.

"Awake, she breathed.

"Come—come and sit down," he said, huskily. He drew her to the big couch, but she signed to him to sit, and sinking on to the thick fur at his feet, she leaned her arm on his knee and her head on her arm. Gaunt stroked her hair with a trembling hand and stared at the fire.

Conscience stung and lashed him, but its sting, its whip, fell upon a heart made insensible by passion. If, he argued to himself, he did not take her away, she would marry Mershon. He knew the pressure which would be brought to bear, knew that she would not be able to withstand it. She would marry a man she did not love. And from such a hell, such a life in death, surely, Gaunt, the man she loved, ought to snatch her at any cost. The happiness, the misery of her life, hung in the balance.

After all, would the wrong be very great? He could take her away to some land where she would not be likely to meet any English people. They could hide themselves under an assumed name. No breath of shame or reproach should touch her. He would watch over her happiness every hour of his life. And she should be happy!

And—and perhaps fate would take pity on them and kill that other woman, his wife. Then he would marry Decima, and—and all would be well.

One knows what an admirable advocate the devil can be, and now he was pleading with Gaunt not only for Gaunt himself, but for the girl he loved. He could not let her go.

"Decima," he said, and his voice sounded so labored that she raised her head and looked at him with some apprehension in her eyes, "I—I want you to understand. We must go—if we go—alone; we could not take Bobby with us. Child, the world—everybody—will blame me for taking you."

"It would be wrong?" she said, thoughtfully.

"It would be wrong," he said, as if the admission were wrung from him. "That is, in the eyes of the world; but—but I am not sure—I feel that even if it be wrong, it would be a greater sin to let you go back to—to—him."

She shuddered.

"I could not go back," she said, gravely. "Not now, not now, I know"—she paused, then went on, with a sweet abandon—"that I love you."

He bent his head until his lips touched her hair. Then he rose, and taking her in his arms, put her in the chair.

"Let me think," he said.

He began to pace the room, and walked to and fro with quick steps. His blood was at fever heat, and something beat at the back of his brain like the crash of a wave against a rock.

Now and again he stopped and aimlessly took up some article from the table and looked at it mechanically. One of the things was a quaint Persian dagger in an exquisitely enameled sheath. He drew the blade, looked at it without seeing it, then replaced it.

As he did so the thing fell from his fingers. As he picked it up and poised it on the table, Decima looked round.

"Why are you so troubled?" she said in a low voice full of love and sympathy.

He came to her, and kneeling beside her, took her hands and pressed them against his heart.

"Decima, you must leave yourself, your fate, in my hands. You must trust me. If I let you go now, it—it must be forever. I shall never see you again."

She uttered a faint cry, and stooping, looked into his face with terror and grief in her eyes, on her lips.

"No, no!" she breathed. "I—I could not bear it!"

"You see!" he said. "And if you could not, then how could I, whose love for you is a thousand times greater than your love for me? Dearest, I must take you with me to-morrow. We will have to say good-bye to the past; we will have to begin a new life in a strange place—among strange people. Will you come?"

A great solemnity fell upon her.

"I must come," she said; and the low, sweet voice thrilled through him. "I must do whatever you ask me. I could not let you go away from me, and see you no more. I—I think—I hope—I should die if you did."

He almost laughed.

"That settles it," he said, with a kind of reckless, desperate gayety. "Now, see, dearest, you must go back to Lady Pauline's—it is too late to start to-night. To-morrow morning—at eight o'clock—is that too early?"

She smiled at the triviality of the question. "What hour could be too early? What did it matter?

"Well, then, you must leave the house and take a cab to Charing Cross Station."

"To Charing Cross Station?" she repeated, carefully.

"Yes; I will meet you there—I shall be watching for you; and then—well, the rest remains with me."

She leaned back and looked at him with perfect trust and confidence, as a woman looks when she has placed her life in the hands of the man she loves.

"And when shall we be married?" she asked. "Will it be soon, or shall we have to wait a long time?"

His face quivered.

"It—it may not be for a long time," he said, trying to speak calmly. "Until then we shall have to live away—away from everybody. You will not even be able to write."

A troubled, perplexed expression shone in her eyes as they rested on his. She thought, with a pang of pain and remorse, of her father.

"Why? Because it will be wrong to—to go away with you? Yes, I think I understand."

But he knew she did not—fully. He was silent a moment, then he said, in a constrained voice:

"You do not ask me why I can not marry you now, Decima?"

"No," she said; "I am waiting until you choose to tell me."

"I will tell you—some day," he said, thickly. "Promise me that—that when I do, you will not turn from me, Decima! Promise me that—that when you know you will still love me."

"I promise!" she said. "How could I turn from you? How could I cease to love you? I shall always love you while life lasts. I couldn't do otherwise if I tried, whatever happened. Even if—if you did not love me."

"Hush!" he broke in, almost solemnly. "That is impossible. If you knew—"

He glanced at the clock.

"I am afraid you must go, dearest!" he said. "Heaven! what it costs me to let you go, to part with you even for a few hours!"

She rose, her hands resting on his shoulders, and he kissed her dress as it touched him.

"It will not be for long," she said, with a happy little sigh. "I shall not sleep, I know. I shall lie awake and try and realise what has happened to me. It all seems like a dream."

"May you never wake from it, dearest!" he murmured.

She laughed softly.

"I wonder where Bobby is? I should like to have seen him, to have told him. But I am not to tell him; I forgot."

"No," he said; "you must tell no one."

"My things are in his room," she said. "I will go and get them."

As she spoke, she looked up and down the mantel-shelf, as if she were searching for something.

"I put a long pin—

ing so, he took up the portrait, lying face downward, and was putting it down again, when, as mechanically, he glanced at it.

He did not start, uttered no cry, but he stood stock still and stared at the bewitching face in the silver frame, as if he had suddenly fallen under a spell. Gradually a deathly pallor spread over his face, his eyes became distended.

"Who—what?" broke from his set lips.

Decima had found the pin, and had turned to leave the room. She came back to him and looked over his shoulder.

"That portrait? Whose is it?" she asked.

She had not seen his face.

His senses seemed to be deserting him; he could not remove his eyes from the face, which, with its "beauty of the devil," seemed to smile up at him mockingly, derisively. His silence smote her, and she looked at him. A low cry broke from her lips.

"What—what is the matter?" she murmured. "What—is it? I—I found it, saw it. Whose portrait is it?"

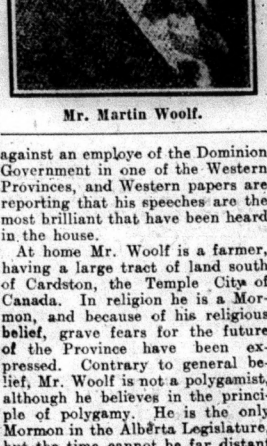

Though he tried to crush the answer down, it would come, as if he had lost control of his voice.

"It is my wife," he said, as a man speaks in his sleep.

against an employe of the Dominion Government in one of the Western Provinces, and Western papers are reporting that his speeches are the most brilliant that have been heard in the house.

At home Mr. Woolf is a farmer, having a large tract of land south of Cardston, the Temple City of Canada. In religion he is a Mormon, and because of his religious belief, grave fears for the future of the Province have been expressed. Contrary to general belief, Mr. Woolf is not a polygamist, although he believes in the principle of polygamy. He is the only Mormon in the Alberta Legislature, but the time cannot be far distant when a redistribution must be made to take in another large tract settled by Mormons, and in all probability another Mormon will have a seat in the House.

AN INFLAMMABLE CARGO.

Mineral Water and Sodium Make a Bad Combination.

In nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of a thousand, water, if applied in sufficient quantity, will eventually quench any fire. But the thousandth case, when water not only proves ineffectual, but actually kindles and nourishes the fire, is a perfectly possible occurrence.

When the freighter Hardy steamed out of Le Treport, France, she carried, besides the mineral water in her hold, a number of small wooden cases marked "metallic sodium."

The Channel was rough. The vessel rolled and pitched violently. The captain saw that the ship was listing to port, and suspecting that the cargo was shifting, sent a boatswain below to investigate. As the boatswain entered the hold, he saw that several cases of mineral water had broken, and that the water was swishing about in the hold. Then suddenly he saw one of the wooden cases marked "sodium" burst into flame.

Immediately he gave the alarm, and the crew rushed to their fire stations. The captain directed the men to play the hose into the hold. As the first stream of water struck the burning case, there were several explosions, as package after package within the case caught fire. By this time two other cases of sodium had broken open, and their contents, as they came in contact with the water from the hose, burst into flames.

The crew could not believe their eyes. The more water they poured on the fire, the more intense grew the conflagration. Then suddenly two cases flew into the air, crashed against the overhead beams, and spread out in sheets of fire, the smaller pieces dropping back only to bounce and dance about, hot balls of flame, in the half-swamped hold.

Panic-stricken, the crew dropped the hose lines and fled above decks. But the captain ordered the cargo flung into the sea, and led his men back into the hold. They succeeded in throwing several of the cases overboard. But as each case hit the waves, it rebounded into the air, a flaming ball.

The superstitious crew was fast becoming unmanageable, and the captain saw that, in any case, he must abandon the ship. He ordered the crew to the boats not one moment too soon, for as the boats rowed away from the blazing hulk, several loud explosions came from the hold. Then there was one mighty detonation; the freighter broke in two, and plunged out of sight.

The origin of the fire was, of course, in the sodium. Sodium is a peculiar metal, which oxydizes rapidly when water touches it, and flames as soon as the water becomes warm. According to the chemist's classification, it is the second member of the alkali group that includes lithium, potassium, rubidium and caesium. All of these elements have the same characteristics as sodium in greater or less degree. The sodium should have been shipped in hermetically sealed tin cans enclosed in wooden cases. But the rolling of the ship and the careless stowing of the cargo broke open some of these cases, and the sodium, which was not properly packed, was liberated.

DROP IN THE BIRTH RATE

The Decrease In Ontario Is In Line With Trend of the Past Few Years

A despatch from Toronto says: The little, scantily-clad gentleman known as Cupid spent a busy 12 months in 1912, his efforts in Ontario bringing an increase of 3,038 marriages, or at the rate of 0.9 per thousand population; but in spite of this fact the provincial birth rate continues on the down grade. The report of the Registrar-General shows a birth rate of only 22.4, the lowest since 1903, and two points below 1911. The responsibility for Ontario's declining birth rate apparently rests with the cities and towns. The cities with a record of 22,920 marriages were able to report only 15,917 births, while the rural municipalities of the province, with but 10,910 marriages, had 32,028 births, or a considerably better percentage. The total number of births in Ontario was 50,870, with 28,845 marriages.

The province is still making progress in the reduction of its death rate, and now has a rate lower than most of the leading countries of the world. During 1912 there were 23,150 deaths, a ratio of 12.4 per thousand, or .2 lower than in 1911. The saddening part of the report, that dealing with illegitimate births, shows an increase of 168, bringing the rate up to 21.3 per thousand births. The cities of the province contributed 72 per cent. of the illegitimacy.

The records show less marrying between Protestants and Roman Catholics, 820 men and 1,096 women of the Catholic Church marrying outside their faith. Almost two-thirds of the marriages are contracted between the ages of 20 and 30. A number of unusual marriages were recorded, one man of 25 marrying a woman over 70. Three women under 30 years of age married men over 70.

The fight against the "white plague" is making steady headway, although the reduction in the death rate from this disease was less in 1912 than in several years previous. The death list was 2,250, a decrease of 103, and a reduction in ratio of .05 per cent. At the present time about seven per cent. of the deaths in Ontario are due to tuberculosis, and the heaviest toll is taken upon young people of between 20 and 30.

It will astonish some people to know that one out of every 10 children born in Ontario dies before reaching five years of age. In 1912 8,230 children under the age of five years died, 6,494 of them before completing the twelfth month, a rate of 110.3 per thousand births. There were 200 less deaths from diarrhoea than in 1911, the rate from this dangerous infant trouble being the lowest in six years, due largely to the greater interest taken in child welfare and in educating young mothers to take more intelligent care of their children.

A despatch from London says: With the view of asking the British Government to reconsider its decision in regard to participation in the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco in 1915, an influential committee has been formed here composed of the heads of the great steamship, commercial and manufacturing companies. The committee points out that since the Government announced its negative decision circumstances have changed considerably and many of the large manufacturers have determined to take advantage of the improved tariff conditions in the United States and send exhibits to San Francisco. The committee is non-political.

Headache Over the Eyes? Look For Nasal Catarrh

Catarrh Never Stops In One Place—It Spreads Rapidly—Often Ruins Health Completely.

In this changeable climate it is the little colds that drift into Catarrh. Unless the inflammation is checked it passes rapidly from the throat or nose to the bronchial tubes and then to the lungs. You can't make new lungs any more than you can make new fingers or toes, but you can cure Catarrh.

The surest cure consists of breathing in the healing balsamic essences of CATARRHOZONE, which is simply a medicated vapor so full of rich curative properties that every trace of Catarrh vanishes before it.

"The soothing piney vapor of Catarrhozone is the most powerful medicine I ever used," writes Mrs. Edmond J. Christine, of Saskatoon. "Every breath drawn through the Inhaler sends a grateful feeling through the air passages of the nose and throat. Catarrhozone cured me of frightful headaches over the eyes, relieved me of a stuffy feeling in the nose, and an irritable hacking cough that had been the bane of my life for a year. My general health is greatly improved, my appetite and digestion are considerably better than before. Catarrhozone has been the means of giving me such health as I always desired, but never possessed."

Even though catarrh has a firm hold on you, and affects your throat, nose or ears, you can thoroughly cure it with Catarrhozone. Large size, guaranteed, costs $1.00; smaller size 50c.; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

A GOOD IDEA.

Western Provinces to Take Care of the Feeble-Minded.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: It is understood that negotiations are far advanced between the Governments of the three prairie provinces whereby each will take charge, for the three, of one of the three branches of feeble-minded, blind, and deaf and dumb institutional work. Alberta will look after the feeble-minded, Saskatchewan the blind, and Manitoba the deaf and dumb. The old Manitoba Government Agricultural College on the banks of the Assiniboine River, southwest of the city, comprising fine buildings, erected only a few years ago, will be established as a college for the deaf and dumb.

COMMENT ON EVENTS

Beef Shortage.

It is affirmed that everything points to a world-wide shortage of beef cattle, and, unless something is done to remedy conditions, the shortage will become acute and the price of meat will mount still higher. At the recent convention of the American Meat Packers, it was decided to expend $500,000 during the next five years in educating the farmers throughout the United States in regard to the raising of cattle. It was pointed out that if every small farmer would raise at least two beef steers a year the fear of a shortage would soon be a thing of the past.

The association also went on record against the "unnecessary slaughtering of heifer calves as a step in a campaign of education to prevent a further shortage in the country's meat supply." Another recommendation made was that legislation be enacted preventing the killing of calves for veal. It is estimated that 9,000,000 are slaughtered in the United States each year while if these calves were allowed to reach the age of three or four years, the supply of beef would be increased 9,000,000,000 pounds.

Canada should profit by these recommendations. Farmers should raise more cattle and go in for mixed farming instead of confining their sole efforts to the growing of grain. As far as Ontario and Eastern Canada is concerned, it would seem to be wisdom to go extensively into cattle raising owing to the removal of the American duty with the consequent greater demand from that country for beef cattle.

Baseball a Civilizing Force.

During the American occupation of the Philippines conditions in the island have greatly improved, even though there may yet be much to accomplish. Numbers of the natives who a few years ago were living as savages now build houses and cultivate plots of ground. The physique of the young men and boys has become more robust. Disease has been lessened. There is less vicious pastime, and morally, mentally and physically the natives have benefited through that change. What has brought about the improvement? Religious workers, doctors, health officers, teachers? All have helped, of course; but first among the civilizing factors, says Mr. Frederick Chamberlain, the author of "The Philippine Problem," have been baseball and other athletic sports.

Comparing Budgets.

M. Rene Lauret has recently given some interesting comparisons between the national expenditures of France and Germany. Many attempts have been made to ascertain the exact average amount in taxation per head of the population paid in each country, but the results are too contradictory to make it possible to accept them without reserve. M. Y. M. Goblet puts it at 165 francs in Germany and 142 francs in France. M. Jules Roche, again, estimates that the Prussian pays 59 francs against 98 francs in France. The Bulletin de Statisque et de Legislation Comparee makes the amount paid by each person in Germany 51 francs, and the writer thinks the last two estimates nearer the truth than that of M. Goblet.

Much depends on the way in which the amount is reckoned, the items included, and the different articles taxed in each country. Railways in Germany, for instance, form almost a state monopoly; in France tobacco is a monopoly. Military expenditure in Germany is higher than in France, but, compared with the population, it is less. Germany spends more than France on foreign affairs, but less on colonies. Public powers and administration, justice, etc., cost more in Germany, or, at any rate, in Prussia, than in France. The expenditure on education seems pretty equal in both countries. France sacrifices more on behalf of commerce and public works, and Prussia more for agriculture.

Food Faddists.

The public who eat, and they are largely in the majority, have become alarmed at the campaign of the food faddists and have come to regard with suspicion the most harmless articles of diet. A bulletin recently issued by the United States department of agriculture will aid in renewing a waning confidence. "Some of the advocates of freak diets are sincere, but are themselves deluded," says the warning. "Others are fakers who seek to make monetary gain by advising peculiar systems of diet. Neither class can offer trustworthy advice. In most of the recommendations of these self-established 'experts' there is hardly a shadow of reason, though they may seem plausible. One of their methods of reasoning is to use isolated and often unrelated facts of science as evidence that their peculiar system is of value. They completely ignore statements in current historical and scientific literature which could negative their contentions.

Much of the supposed scientific advice now being sold for a price is really little more than folklore. A great many of the statements which are used as arguments have been traced by the government specialists and found to come from works on diet written so long ago as to be no longer considered of value except to the student of the history of diets. The truth of the matter is, however," adds the statement, "that man's chances of health are best when he eats with moderation a diet made up of clean, wholesome, ordinary foods, well prepared in the usual ways. Proper cooking sterilizes foods. If the deductions of many food faddists accepted as facts were really operative, it would be difficult to explain how the human race had survived." The department adds a warning against the danger of alleged mail cures sold by "dietic experts."

Fox Farms in Alberta.

Black fox farms are now being started in Alberta. There is one near Edmonton which has already been in existence some months. The Indians are getting wise to the big profits that are being made out of black foxes, and are contemplating a raise in the price of the valuable animals which they trap, and which they have hitherto been selling for a song. Even the Indian will turn. It seems that there are victims of wildcatting in black foxes just as there have been victims of wildcatting in real estate, and will undoubtedly be victims of wildcatting in oil. Only in the first case the victim is the poor Indian, whose untutored mind is only just beginning to comprehend the dark ways and vain tricks of the white man.

The Pace of the West.

The following little calculation may be commended to those who think the west is making too fast a pace. We owe it to Mr. J. J. Haslam, a well-known westerner. The cash value of the 1913 crop for wheat, oats, flax and barley may be put at $125,539,900. The indebtedness of the farmers is estimated at $125,000,000. Of this $60,000,000 is owing to mortgage companies, $20,000,000 to machinery companies, $20,000,000 to merchants, and about $10,000,000 other debts. If the western farmer were to take one-seventh of his crop each year, not an out-of-the-way proportion, thinks the London Canadian Gazette, to pay off his debts, he would be clear in seven years, and economically vastly better off than any farmer in the world.

Figures Show That Number of Blind and Deaf and Dumb Has Decreased In Dominion

A despatch from Ottawa says: The number of people in Canada who are either blind or deaf and dumb is shown by the latest census bulletin to be less than at any time during the past thirty years. There are many more, however, of unsound mind. Thirty years ago there were eight males and six females blind out of every ten thousand. The figures now are 4.8 and 4.1. There are just half as many deaf and dumb as there were in 1881, six in ten thousand as against twelve. Women are a little the less unfortunate in both cases. It is interesting to note that of men afflicted with loss of sight three more are married than have remained single, while 285 are now widowers. Blind women seem to be unfortunate in losing their husbands—239 still have spouses, 429 no longer have, while 618 never had. There are forty more blind people in Quebec than in Ontario. The total for all Canada is 4,584.

The deaf and dumb are not so much married, seven out of ten both male and female remaining in a state of single blessedness. Out of 4,584 with this infirmity, 1,410 are residents of Ontario, two hundred less than Quebec.

Any wife with an insane husband has 1,768 sisters to sympathize. If he is idiotic he has only 165 married equals in Canada, which is three less than the number of idiot wives. There are 1,251,468 married women in Canada; of these 2,494 are regarded by the census bulletin as insane. There are also 3,731 women who are insane without being married. There are, all told, 1,500 more men than women whose mental machinery is recorded as out of shape. But on a percentage basis the men come off best. Twenty-seven less men than women are of unsound mind in a million of each.

In the matter of origin, the French lead, for of Gallic extraction are 4,000 of the 14,500 insane people and 2,000 of the 6,000 idiots enumerated in the census. Then come the English, the Irish and the Scotch. Two-thirds of the mentally unsound were born in Canada.

Prince Edward Island shows the highest proportion of unsound minds—41 are defective in every 10,000. Ontario is credited with 8,831 as against 6,499 for Quebec. Most of these unfortunates have no occupation, but of those who do work, one in every three is employed on a farm.

The total number of all defectives at the time of the last census was 28,611, of whom 16,530 were males. This means an increase of 250 cases in ten years. The number of defectives per 10,000 has dropped in the same length of time from 51 males to 40 and from 46 females to 38.

AFRAID TO CROSS THE OCEAN.

Miss Evelyn Smithers Put Marriage Off From Year to Year.

A despatch from Montreal says: After being engaged for forty years, Miss Evelyn Smithers, aged 76, of Glasgow, has decided to marry her fiance, J. E. Campbell, of Winnipeg, aged 82. Miss Smithers arrived here on Thursday morning on the Allan liner Virginian, en route for Winnipeg, where the ceremony is to take place. Hitherto Miss Smithers, who became engaged to Mr. Campbell in Scotland, has been afraid to cross the ocean, and put the marriage off from year to year in the hope that Mr. Campbell, who is a grocer in Winnipeg, would make enough money to justify his retiring to his old home for the rest of his days. As Mr. Campbell has never been able to do this, Miss Smithers at last conquered her fear of the sea.

THE CANADIAN NORTHERN

Big Line to Be Finished Early Next Year and Trains Running Through Mount Royal by August

A despatch from Toronto says: Canada's second completed transcontinental railway will be in operation early next year. Sir Donald Mann made the statement on Thursday evening in an interview in which he emphatically disposed of the report that the Canadian Northern Railway were seeking from the Dominion Government a further guarantee of bonds to the amount of $25,000,000. The Canadian Northern line from ocean to ocean will be carrying traffic, according to the big railway builder, by the early summer of 1914.

Speaking of the early completion of the Canadian Northern transcontinental, Sir Donald stated that he estimated that by December 15 work on either end of the tunnel at Montreal would meet and the excavation be completed. The widening of the tunnel is already one-third completed and by next August the two tracks will be operating through it. Some time about the end of the present year he estimates that the line between Sudbury and Port Arthur will be connected up and ready for operation. He stated that all the grading on the Transcontinental from Quebec to Vancouver has been completed but forty miles between Pembroke and North Bay, and fifty-three miles between Kamloops and Yellowhead Pass in the Rockies had been completed, and over these two short stretches grading is partially accomplished.

"By early spring or summer at the latest the first train will run over the completed line," declared the railway builder. "That is how close we are to the finish. Under such circumstances there is no reason why we should call upon the Government for any further assistance, nor has such a step been even contemplated."

Mark This Man

Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said,
"My trade of late is getting bad,
I'll try another muslin ad."
If such there be go mark him well;
For him no bank account shall swell;
No Angel watch the Golden stair
To welcome home a millhonaire.
The man who never asks for trade
By local sign and oft displayed,
Cares more for rest than worldly gain,
And patronage but gives him pain.
Tread lightly, friend, let no rude sound
Disturb his solitude Profound;
Here let him live in calm repose
Unsought except by men he owes.
And when he dies go plant him deep
That naught may break his dreamless sleep;
That no rude clamor may dispel
The quiet that he loves so well.
And that the world may know its loss
Place on his grave a wreath of moss;
And on a stone above, "Here lies
A chump who wouldn't Advertise."

The Weighing of Butter and Cheese

For a considerable time persistent complaints were made to officers of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa by producers and vendors of dairy produce in Eastern Ontario and Quebec regarding the unsatisfactory methods by which butter and cheese were weighed in Montreal. So numerous were the charges and so serious the allegations that it was considered necessary by the Government to have the matter properly investigated. Consequently in the summer of 1912 a Royal Commission was appointed. The investigation by this Commission covered several months and involved the taking of evidence at many points and from many people who were considered likely to be able to shed light on the subject.

The Commission consisting of R. A. Pringle, Chairman, A. J. Hodgson, and S. J. Macdonell, completed their work some time ago and presented their report to the Honourable the Minister of Agriculture. In this, the advisability of amending the Act respecting the weighing, measuring and gauging of certain articles of general consumption is recommended, as well as the appointment, under the control and direction of the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, of a competent official, with headquarters at Montreal, who shall be charged with the duty of investigating the weights of cheese when shortages arise.

The report of the Commission, consisting of a pamphlet of 17 pages, is ready to be sent to those who apply for it to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, at Ottawa.

Spoke in Behalf of Suffrage

"As Others See Us," a volume by John Graham Brooks, published by the Macmillan Company, quotes a speech delivered by a militant suffragette, a certain Mrs. Skinner, two generations ago. She said:—

Miss President, "feller wimmen," and male trash generally. I am here to-day for the purpose of discussing wimmen's rights, recussing her wrongs and cussing the men.

I believe the sexes were created perfectly equal, with the woman a little more equal than the man.

I believe that the world to-day would be happier if man never existed.

As a success man is a failure, and I bless my stars that my mother was a woman. (Applause.)

I not only maintain these principles, but maintain a shiftless husband besides.

They say man was created first. Well, s'pose he was. Ain't first experiments always failures?

The only decent thing about a man was a rib, and that went into making something better. (Applause.)

And they throw into our faces about taking an apple. I'll bet five dollars that Adam boosted Eve up the tree and only gave her the core.

And what did he do when he was found out? True to his masculine instincts, he sneaked behind Eve and said: "Twan't me; 'twas her." And women had to father everything, and mother it, too.

What we want is the ballot: we're bound to have it, if we have to let down our back hair and swim in a sea of gore.—"Life."

To prevent mustard from drying in the mustard pot, add a little salt when making it.

Cut in Tomatoes

The long tomato season and the abundance of the crop has caused the canneries to lower their prices 17½ cents per dozen cans. This, while meaning much to the wholesalers, will have little effect on the cost of living question as it applies to the consumer for the retail price will remain practically the same.

Tomatoes were the only canned vegetables on which the price was lowered. Peas still stand at 82½ cents a dozen cans and corn is steady at 90 cents. The old price on tomatoes was $1.15. This has been cut to 97½ cents, the second cut within a year.

Recording the Age of Fowls

As, for the various reasons, it is well to keep a record of the age of one's fowls, there are several devices adopted by poultry-keepers whereby they are enabled to do this quite simply. Attaching marking rings on the legs of poultry is, perhaps, the easiest of all methods for keeping an accurate record of the age of poultry, and this is the system most commonly adopted. These rings can be purchased from almost any hardware store for a moderate sum, and they are quite easily fixed on the legs of the birds just above the foot. The advantage of knowing the age of poultry is always felt when selecting birds for table purposes as well as for breeding. All up-to-date poultrymen have some reliable system whereby they can tell the age of every bird in their possession.—W. R. Gilbert, Canadian Farm.

Scotch Irreverence

He was a chubby, brown-faced, bare-legged little urchin from whom, during my vacation, I enquired the way to the nearest golf course.

"Weel," said he, "ye'll gang straight alang here till ye come to the first on yer richt, an' ye'll see a minister—I mean a sign-post," he corrected hastily, "and ye'll get the road frae it."

Thanking him for his information, I next enquired why he called the finger-post a minister.

Shuffling his feet and gazing longingly at the copper I held out to him, he stammered out: "Folks ca' it a minister 'cos it pints the right road but disna gang it itself," and he rushed off to join his companiens, while I retired thinking deeply on the spread of disrespect to the cloth.

Importation and Transit of Horses

The Department of Agriculture of Canada is in receipt of a new Order issued by the Board of Agriculture at London, England, entitled "Horses, (Importation and Transit), Order of 1913."

In Chapter 1 of this Order it is provided that horses, asses and mules brought to Great Britain from abroad must be accompanied by a veterinary certificate of freedom from symptoms of glanders (including farcy, epizootic lymphangitis, ulcerative lymphangitis, dourine, horse-pox, sarcoptic mange, psoroptic mange, influenza, ringworm or strangles, instead of as, at present, from symptoms of glanders, (including farcy) only.

The provisions of Chapter 1 of the Horses (Importation and Transit), Order of 1912, which in effect required horses, asses or mules, brought from abroad to be either accompanied by a License of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries or to be examined at a place of detention at the port of landing, are entirely withdrawn.

This Order came into operation on 1st October, 1913.

The crop value of Alberta this year is valued at $120,000,000.

Poles and Cross-Ties

In 1912, there were 608,550 poles purchased by Canadian railways, and telegraph, telephone and light and power companies, according to a recent bulletin of the Forestry Branch, Ottawa. This represents an outlay of $1,113,521, making the average cost per pole $1.83. The total number of poles purchased and the average price per pole increased somewhat from corresponding figures for 1911.

Cedar made up 86 per cent. of the total number of poles cut, the western cedar being increasingly used for this purpose. Balsam fir, tamarack and spruce made up the balance of the cut, the greater part of the poles being 20 and 25 feet in length.

In 1912 there were purchased 21,308,571 ties representing value of $9,373,869. This represents the large increase of 48.1 per cent. over the number of ties purchased in 1911, due probably to the extensive railway construction now going on.

Jack pine ties made up 36.5 per cent. of the total with an average value of $0.44. Cedar was second on the list with an average cost at point of purchase of forty-five cents, followed by Douglas fir, averaging 30 cents per tie. In all twenty-one different species of of wood were used.

Ties treated with preservatives made up 8.5 per cent. of the number purchased. These were chiefly hardwoods, it being found more economical to treat the heavier, stronger woods than those which are liable to fail from mechanical wear before they have time to decay. Some of the eastern railways are now using hardwood ties exclusively.

A bill to tax the unearned increment on land has passed the Committee of the Whole House in Alberta, and is as good as law. Alberta is the first Government on the North American continent to endorse the principal that the community has a right to participate in the enhanced value of land due to social conditions. The bill, while exempting land which is being farmed, collects from the speculator a part of the profit which he acquires and does not create.

Hallowe'en

Hallowe'en was right royally celebrated in this village on Friday night last, and not all the masqueraders were children.

A number of mining students of Queen's University, Kingston, were among those who participated in the celebration. One of the students put his fist through Mr. A. Heyworth's window, and when caught by the constable had the pleasure of paying two dollars towards repairing the damage.

Women's Institute Meeting

The October meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Jas. Whytock on Friday, 31st inst. The Rev. Mounteer very materially assisted by giving an earnest talk on Thanksgiving or rather Thanks-doing. The only fault with this talk was its brevity. Mrs. Harrison led a discussion on "How to Train our Daughters for the Duties of Life," also "A realistic description of one of the Best Methods of Teaching Obedience." The prizes won by the babies at the Better Babies Contest were then presented, and each baby duly admired and praised. Mrs. Angus McKenzie assisted Mrs. Whytock in serving a delicious lunch. After singing the National Anthem the meeting was adjourned till the 28th of November.

You are Known by Your Teeth

Your teeth tell part of the story, if not all of it. Your teeth indicate the care you exercise. They also show whether you enjoy good health or intend to. Snaggy and decayed teeth indicate an excessive acid condition of the stomach. They suggest that you are nervous, cranky or irritable.

A tooth brush helps you to overcome these conditions, and a good Tooth Brush helps you to do it quickly, because good bristles and a scientifically made Tooth Brush will remove adhering food and tartar—prevent decay and mouth formed acids—and give you the clean sound teeth that make your health what it should be.

Sound teeth mean healthy teeth that secure for you well masticated food perfectly digested and perfect health follows.

Favorite Recipes.

Date Pudding.—One cup chopped dates, one cup chopped nuts, one cup sugar, three tablespoon flour, one teaspoon baking powder, three eggs. Bake in a moderate oven one-half hour.

Coffee Cake.—One cup flour, one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon each of salt and cinnamon, three teaspoons baking powder, two tablespoons melted butter, one-half cup milk, and one egg. Bake in shallow pan in a quick oven after sprinkling top with sugar and cinnamon.

Nut Croquettes.—Chop up one cup English walnuts or hickory nuts and mix with them one cup mashed potatoes, one cup bread crumbs, two eggs, a little salt and lemon juice. Thin with beef stock and add a little onion. Roll in egg and bread crumbs and drop in hot lard. This will make about one dozen.

Sweet Sandwiches.—Bake bananas in their skins until tender. Strip skin off and sprinkle with a few drops of lemon and orange juice. Add also a sprinkling of sugar, mash, and spread on thinly cut bread and butter. Before putting together as sandwiches, cover the mashed banana with grated pineapple.

Banbury Tarts.—For the filling mix one cup raisins, one-half cup currants, six dates, three figs, a small piece of citron, a little candied orange peel (all chopped fine), juice and grated rind of one lemon, one beaten egg. Roll pie crust thin and cut into four inch squares. Put a heaping teaspoon of filling on each, and turn over, pressing the edges together so as to make a little three cornered turnover. Bake a delicate brown.

Luncheon Rolls.—One cup of scalded milk, two tablespoons sugar, one-fourth teaspoon salt; add sugar and salt to milk; when lukewarm add one-half yeast cake dissolved in two tablespoons lukewarm water, then add three-fourths cup of flour. Cover and let rise, then add two tablespoons melted butter and one egg well beaten and flour enough to knead. Let rise, roll, cut in long strips, tie in a bowknot, let rise again, and bake when light.

Stewed Kidneys.—Take two lamb or veal kidneys, cut the good parts into small pieces, and lay them in salted water for a half hour. Wash well; cover with fresh water and put on the stove. Drain as soon as it boils. Chop an onion fine and brown in a tablespoonful of butter. Add a cupful of boiling water, a teaspoonful of salt, and a dash of pepper. Put the kidneys into this and boil gently for half an hour. Ten minutes before serving add a teaspoonful of tomato catsup and one of flour rubbed smooth in a little water.

Chicken Livers.—Wash well to remove all blood, have latter well heated in a skillet, drop in the livers. As soon as they touch the hot fat turn them and do this repeatedly to keep them from hardening on the outside. The secret of good frying lies in turning them often. This keeps the substance soft and juicy. When the livers are fried season them with salt and pepper and fill up the skillet with gravy stock. If you like a thick gravy add a teaspoon of flour to the butter before adding the soup. Another good way to prepare the livers is to stick a clove into each one, sprinkle ground cinnamon and sugar over them and fry in sweet butter. These do not need soup stock, and are served on toast for those who have a sweet tooth.

Hot Slaw.—Cut cabbage fine and put into a cooking vessel with a pint of water, a piece of butter half the size of an egg, a little salt and pepper, and two or three tablespoons of sugar. Let cook down nearly dry, then add cup of vinegar and water mixed, let boil up, and take off the fire and add two well-beaten eggs.

Salad Dressing.—Yolks of four or three whole eggs, a pinch of salt, one teaspoon of mustard, one tablespoon of flour, two tablespoons of sugar, six tablespoons of vinegar, two tablespoons of water, four tablespoons of cream, and one tablespoon of butter. Beat the eggs, add salt, mustard, flour and sugar. Mix all thoroughly; then add vinegar, water, cream, and butter, and then cook. It is splendid dressing for almost every kind of salad.

Concerning Charcoal.

How many housewives look upon charcoal as a valuable necessity in the home? Few. Yet its uses are many. To begin with, it is the best and cheapest disinfectant and deodorizer—in other words, charcoal is the best known disease-catching-preventer and smell-ender.

The smell of cabbage water is not nice. A lump of charcoal in the saucepan prevents all odor. You need not be afraid that the joint, or a fowl, may go bad. Simply put a piece of charcoal in them, and [illegible] cook it just the same, but place in the fish saucepan two or three pieces of charcoal. The fish will be as good as if but just caught.

A wire gauze or muslin bag, filled with charcoal, and hung in the larder, will keep that important place perfectly sweet. A wardrobe which smells of clothes, and makes a bedroom stuffy, can be made all right if two or three little bags of charcoal are hung from the hooks. Jugs or any other vessels which have a nasty smell—and nasty smells herald diseases—can at once be made sweet if rinsed with powdered charcoal and water.

Sinks, and the pipes leading away from them, would always be odorless if, now and again, they were swilled down with water and a little powdered charcoal.

There is a slight disadvantage in using charcoal as a tooth-powder, it involves rinsing the mouth out two or three times, but if that trouble can be borne, then the use of charcoal will make the teeth gleaming white, the breath sweet, and bring to nought the ill effects of fermentation of little bits of food in the teeth crevices.

A piece of charcoal suspended in muslin in drinking water makes it quite safe to drink. Expensive filters are but charcoal, after all.

In cases of burns, the application of powdered charcoal soothes the pain and heals the sore like magic.

Chronic sores which are unpleasant, if bandaged with cotton wool layered with charcoal, at once become all right.

"All odors end here" is charcoal's inflexible rule.

Open drains and gulleys—fruitful causes of fever—can be made quite harmless, if a sort of sandwich of wire gauze and charcoal is fixed or laid over them. No smell, and no fear of catching anything.

The magical virtues of charcoal are greatly increased if it is made red hot before use and then cooked down. This can easily be done by getting an ordinary tin, making holes round the sides, fixing a wire handle, and then making one piece of charcoal hot in the fire and dropping it in the tin with the rest.

Swing the tin too and fro, and the whole mass will soon be red hot.

Hints for the Home.

Celery may be freshened by being left over night in a solution of salt and water.

Always empty out any water left before filling the kettle. Frequently the flat taste of tea is caused by using water that has already been boiled.

When baking potatoes grease them first with a little butter, and when cooked they will be beautifully brown and crisp, with the glazed appearance that make them so appetising.

An apple pie made without the upper crust is a pleasing change. Line the pie plate and bake the under crust; fill with apple sauce, seasoned to taste and cover the top with whipped cream.

A flat trunk tray kept in the laundry will prove a great convenience. The napkins, doilies, lunch cloths, etc., may be laid out on it in neat separate piles.

Green mayonnaise is a tempting novelty to serve with cold-boiled white fish or vegetable salads. It is made in the usual way, tinted with scalded and chopped parsley, and with a few chopped olives mixed in.

Old velveteen should be saved for polishing cloths. It will serve the purpose of wash cloths for plate cleaning and save buying anything fresh. Wash the velveteen in soapy water as often as needed and lay out to dry.

For a cream whip, which is easily made, fill sherbet glasses half full of preserved fruit. Heap them with whipped cream that has been flavored with vanilla and spread tops lightly with cocoa, cocoanut or minced nuts.

TALKING ALARM CLOCK

"Get Up, Get Up, Lazy Man," Its Newest Refrain.

It has often seemed, after the announcement of an invention to which the attention of the entire civilized world has been called, that the human mind could scarcely invent anything more and fashion it in material form, but the countless dreams of inventors continue to be realized in astounding numbers.

Every week, every month, the trade journals advertise and comment upon new things in the lines which they represent and publish new ideas which this material labor saving age seizes and makes its own.

An alarm clock which awakens you with the words of a disgusted wife who has breakfast on the table and a large vessel which carries submarines over long distances by means of a "pouch" are among the newest offerings.

As an ever present need, the alarm clock will probably be put into more general household use than the ship with the "pouch" for carrying submarines. In the evening before retiring you set the clock for 6:30; at 6:30 you will probably get up. Here is what will waken you:

"Six thirty, six thirty, six thirty; time to get up; get up, can't you? Get up, you miserable, lazy man. Get up, get up, get up!"

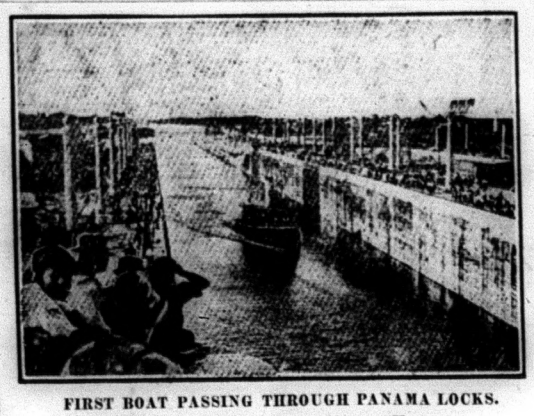

The first clock of this kind was exhibited in 1900, but it cost $2,500 to make it. The present offering costs $25. If you are awake in the middle of the night and wish to know the time, press a button and the clock will tell you the nearest quarter hour as: "Two fifteen," if it happens to be 2:13 or 2:18. The phonographic record is on an endless belt and the grooves in which the voice vibrations are recorded run lengthwise of the belt. The belt continues to give out sound until shut off when once started. So far the clocks have been supplied with belts which talk in thirty-five languages.

The "kangaroo" vessel is an invention which is being tried in the French navy. It is so called because the idea of taking the submarine aboard may be said to be an imitation of the way in which the female kangaroo carries her young. The vessel is built so that her stern may be sunk by water ballast and the plates, framework and beams removed from the bow. This manipulation reveals a large chamber into which the submarine may be driven. The bow is then sunk, also by water ballast. The submarine slides into its travelling dry dock and a reverse series of manipulations brings the "kangaroo" back into position for a voyage.

A new material has been invented called micarta, and is designed to take the place of hard fibre, glass, porcelain, hard rubber and other substances which are used as insulation, gear blanks, conduit for automobile wiring and the thousand and one other uses to which nonconductors are put in the handling of electricity. Micarta can be sawed, milled, turned, tapped or threaded, but it cannot be punched except in thin sheets. It is contended that it will not warp, expand or shrink with age or exposure.

Not an invention, perhaps, but quite interesting as a novelty are the printed four-in-hand ties which English haberdashers are preparing to put on the market this fall. The prints will represent sports and other lines of activity. One necktie will show an aeroplane flying over a battleship and another will bear the figures of ballet dancers. A third style shows pictures of pheasants and grouse, and is evidently intended to show that the wearer will go hunting before long. Still another carries the heads of a girl and a thoroughbred race horse, indicating a taste for racing, and so on.

Those who buy belting for machinery will not have to worry about the price of leather in the years to come if a certain sort of belting which is being manufactured by a firm in Connecticut proves to be a success. The new product is called flexible steel belting and is really a step further than the chain and sprocket idea. The belting is made in a complicated series of links, and can be used on all pulleys of from two inches in diameter to the largest size. It has been designed especially for service where atmospheric conditions are bad for leather and rubber belts.

The tug "Gatun," which has been hauling mud from the Atlantic entrance to the canal, had the honor of being the first vessel to pass through the Gatun locks of the Panama Canal on Sept. 26. The tug made the ascent from the Atlantic Ocean to Gatun Lake in two hours.

RESCUING THE PERISHING

If We Would Live Nobly Then Must We Refuse Deliverance for Ourselves While Others Perish

In one of the most beautiful legends of the Buddha we read that "far, far back, in the distant aeons" there lived a hermit, Sumedha by name, who found that he had solved the secret of existence and could thus, if he so pleased, cut himself off from that endless chain of being in which he, like every other unhappy mortal, was ensnared. Deliverance from the terrible succession of rebirths—Karma, as it was called—was now his; and yet—he declined to take advantage of his saving knowledge! "Why," said he, "should I attain deliverance alone? I will embark anew on the ocean of existence in a ship which will convey men and devas." To this work, therefore, of rescuing the ignorant and perishing he forthwith devoted himself through a long series of existences, until at last the hour arrived when he knew not only how to save himself but also how to impart this knowledge unto others. Then did he appear upon the earth as Guatama, the Buddha, and show to men the Eight-Fold Path to Nirvana!

The Remarkable Thing

about this impressive story is the fact that it lays down as a basic principle for the whole of life that which we much too easily regard as demanded only by exceptional occasions. In the face of some great crisis of disaster there are never wanting dauntless souls who gladly save others at the expense of their own happiness and security. A man safe upon the shore leaps into the sea in a sublime endeavor to bring to land a drowning stranger. A passerby dashes into a burning house to rescue a sleeping baby. A woman on the Titanic gives up her seat in a lifeboat to an older and feebler passenger and herself returns smilingly to the deck of the sinking vessel.

Thus ever is the hero present when the heroic action must be done! But how many of us thus sacrifice ourselves for others not only at such times as these [illegible] also in the ordinary [illegible] routine yet is it this very duty of hazarding our own security "for others' sakes," as much in the commonplace as in the critical events of life, which constitutes the pith and marrow of the legend which I have taken for my text. If we would live as nobly as Sumedha then must we as gladly refuse deliverance for ourselves while others perish. We will refuse to bask serenely in the light of knowledge while others are stumbling in the darkness of ignorance. We will refuse to share the luxury of wealth while multitudes are struggling in feverish anxiety to keep body and soul together. We will refuse to shelter ourselves behind the bulwarks of respectability while millions of waifs and outcasts are thronging our slums, crowding our prisons and rotting in the end in our Potters' Fields. We will refuse, in a word, like the ancient hermit, to

"Attain Deliverance Alone!"

Rescued ourselves by some blessing of inheritance or accident of fortune, or grace of personal endeavor, from the miseries of ignorance, poverty and social outlawry we will plunge back into the welter of the world's wretchedness and labor, "while it is yet day," to bring to others that glad deliverance of knowledge, economic security and friendly brotherhood which we ourselves have known. For why should we be educated and others ignorant? Why should we be rich and others poor? Why should we be lifted up upon a rock and others be cast down into the pit? What we have all shall have! Yea, this they shall have even though it be purchased at the price of our own denial or destruction!

To scorn to be saved while others perish, to decline to live while others die—and this, not only in the awful crises of disaster, but quite as much in the ordinary courses of daily life, where "a thousand fall at (our) side and ten thousand at (our) right hand"—here is "the [illegible] duty [illegible]" so long as the

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, NOVEMBER 9.

Lesson VI. Abstinence for the Sake of Others, Rom. 14.7-21. Golden Text, Rom. 14.21.

Verse 7. The verses selected as the basis for our temperance lesson to-day are a part only of a longer passage (Rom. 14. 1 to 15. 6) in which the apostle Paul discusses the broader theme of Christian toleration, or the relationship between the strong and the weak in faith. In preceding chapters he has spoken of Christian sacrifice, of the relation of the Christian disciple to others not of the faith; he has discussed such subjects as Christian vengeance, the relation between the church and the state, the one great obligation of every Christian disciple, and the law of love. In this chapter he proceeds to exhort those who have grasped the fuller meaning of the Christian faith that they condemn not their fellow Christians who are still bound by detailed rules relating to food and drink and the observance of certain days. He has urged upon his readers the necessity of each one becoming established in his own mind with regard to essentials and nonessentials of daily conduct. He points out that it is to Christ alone that each will be responsible, and proceeds in the verses of our lesson passage to exhort once more against censoriousness, adding also an exhortation to those strong in faith that they place no obstacles in the way of their weaker fellow-Christians.

None of us liveth to himself—Every life is lived in relation, none in isolation.

8. Unto the Lord—The apostle is thinking of the relationship of every human life to the divine life, rather than to other human lives.

10. But thou—Thou fault-finder. The judgment-seat of God—His immediate presence, in which all things become manifest.

12. So then—This verse belongs properly with verses 1-11, to which longer passage it forms a conclusion. Personal responsibility, the apostle has pointed out, should be a sufficient reason for consistency of action in one's own life and charity towards others.

13. Let us not therefore judge—The apostle includes himself with those to whom more especially the letter is written. We note again the broad and general character of his argument.

This rather—There is a higher principle of action than that of discovering the error in another's life, and that is the exercising of great care that no man put a stumblingblock in his brother's way.

14. Nothing is unclean in itself—The apostle is thinking of the ceremonial law and of the foods and drinks, the meats and wines, offered in the public market place after having been dedicated to heathen idols. These latter many considered as improper articles of food for a Christian because of their previous association with idol worship. Paul, however, insists that to him who is able to rise to the moral standard involved even these things need not in themselves be defiling or wrong.

Save that to him who accounteth anything to be unclean—Only if a man believes that a certain course of action is wrong, and is compelled by the opinion and practice of his fellows to do violence to his own conscience, he commits sin.

15. Destroy not with thy meat him for whom Christ died—A special application of the general principle announced in verse 13, that none should give another occasion for stumbling.

16. Your good—The course of action concerning which you yourself are persuaded that it is right. Consent to adopt another course rather than have others look upon you as one who is doing wrong continually.

17. The kingdom of God—An echo of our Lord's teaching.

19. Things which make for peace—These are the essentials of conduct, and together with those things whereby Christians may edify one another, can be considered only after the occasions for friction and misunderstanding have been removed.

It Depends.

Among the members of a working gang on a certain railroad was an Irishman who claimed to be very good at figures. The boss, thinking that he would get ahead of Pat, said: "Say, Pat, how many shirts can you get out of a yard?"

"That depinds," answered Pat, "on whose yard you get into."

It's a great thing to be a pretty woman. It really means that you can do anything you like.

NEWS FROM SUNSET COAST

WHAT THE WESTERN PEOPLE ARE DOING.

Progress of the Great West Told in a Few Pointed Paragraphs.

On the coast district of British Columbia, in August, a record amount of timber was scaled, amounting to 66,382,160 feet.

Sir Gilbert Parker, in a speech before the Canadian Club at Vancouver, prophesied that city would have a population of 750,000 in 25 years.

New Westminster Council passed a by-law providing for a weekly half-holiday in stores, and then withdrew it on representations of merchants.

At New Westminster, Andrew Gabriel was fined $25 and costs for carrying a revolver. This was the first prosecution under the amended act.

Vancouver has passed a by-law providing that, in future, all loaves of plain bread must weigh 20 ounces and all loaves of fancy bread 16 ounces.

The C.P.R. will use four powerful electric locomotives, costing $75,000 each, on that section of its line extending from Castlegar to Rossland.

Vancouver's exhibition had an attendance of 101,306 for the week. Three days' bad weather spoiled the show, which will have a deficit of about $7,000.

The C.P.R. has raised the scale of pay for officers on the Empresses. The raise all round averages $20 a month, and in future all junior officers will receive $60 a month.

In consequence of the inability of canners in the district of Penticton, B.C., to handle the enormous peach crop this year, thousands of tons of luscious fruit rotted in the orchards.

Near Nelson, B.C., Peter McEachran struck at a squirrel on a pole with a long steel rod. The pole carried wires of 20,000 voltage. Peter missed the squirrel and struck a wire, falling to the ground dead; electrocuted.

Vancouver police stopped all card and dice games among Chinese, and the wily Chinks found a substitute in domino poker. Twenty of them were hauled in by the police at one swoop, and each one found a bondsman in $500.

In Capt. Sinclair, third officer of the C.P.R. liner Empress of Asia, that steamship has the tallest officer in the British merchant service. He is 6 feet 4 inches tall, and was the last man to command a British four-master full-rigged ship.

Two Vancouver girls ran away from their homes and went to Seattle, where the police arrested them and sent them back. The parents of both girls are wealthy, but the runaways said they wanted to get jobs where they could support themselves.

The C.P.R. is having two fast turbine ships built in the old country for the ferry service between Victoria and Vancouver. They will be 395 feet in length, 54 feet beam, and have a guaranteed speed of 22½ knots. It is expected they will be in commission by the spring of 1915.

Over half a million dollars have been spent on the development of the Canadian Marble Works at Marblehead, B.C., by Winnipeg capitalists, and it is claimed that recent developments have been such as to inspire confidence. A block over 100 cubic feet has been taken out.

Dr. Stewart, of Mission, B.C., did not know where the boundary line between British and U.S. territory was, consequently he held a British inquest with a British jury on American soil into the death of a motorman who was killed in a collision near Chilliwack, B.C. The crown authorities could not recognize the findings of the inquest, and it had to be all done over again on British soil.

The Way Of It.

"Miss Bay made a hit with Jack the first glance she gave him."

"I see—a sort of glancing bow."

It is the privilege of few to have their faces on coins. Most people are content to get their hands on them.

A benevolent old gentleman was walking through the outskirts of a town when a woman shot out into the road, beating unmercifully a little lad. "My good woman," exclaimed the kindly one, as he seized the woman's arm to stop her, "you mustn't do that. What harm has he done?" "What! I mustn't do that? What harm has he done?" she shrieked. "If you would like to know, he has opened the hen-roost and all the fowls have skedaddled

LIFE'S SUNSHINE

Gladdens Those Who Regain New Health and Strength

When the glow of health comes back to sallow cheeks; when languid weakness gives place to vigor; when you notice some pale, exhausted invalid restored to active health—enquire. More than likely you will find the cure to have been yet another of the thousands already wrought by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Headache and neuralgia, St. Vitus dance and twitching of the limbs, indigestion and rheumatism, eczema and disfiguring eruptions, and the ailments of growing girls and women all disappear when the veins are filled with the new, rich blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make. Here is one instance among thousands; Mr. F. Ashford, Haileybury, Ont., says: "Some years ago I completed a lengthy term of service in India, the last three years being spent in the beautiful but treacherous Poshawar Valley. Ague and dengue fever were rife, and although I was fortunate enough to escape a severe attack of either, on my return home it soon became apparent that the enervating climatic conditions had left their ravages on my constitution. In short the reaction had set in, and inexhorable nature was exacting a severe toll from years of strenuous labor. My first warning of the impending breakdown were severe pains in the back of the head and eyes, insomnia, irritability, a general anaemic condition and an indefinable nervousness. Life had lost its zest, work became impossible and companionship intolerable. It really seemed that I was swiftly passing to that stage where nervousness ends and insanity begins, when by chance I read an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I confess I was skeptical of them doing what doctors had failed to do, but concluded that the cost was small, and perhaps, the chance in their favor, and so decided to try them. To my joy there was soon an improvement, and a continuance of the treatment effected a complete cure. I was now as fit and healthy as any man and am grateful that the lucky perusal of an advertisement brought to my notice the wonderful curative properties of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

KING GEORGE'S HOME LIFE.

Great Britain's Ruler Described as Best Father in England.

The King's home life and tastes have been described in the Liverpool Daily Post by the writer of "From a Club Window."

"In private life he is the simplest and quietest of English gentlemen. He is the most domestic of men, the kindest of fathers, and always happy in the bosom of his family. The King is the best father in England. Next to his children, the King best likes agriculture, but he has practically no time for this.

"His Majesty is a most abstemious man, not fond of champagne, but as a rule drinking a light wine or whiskey well deluted with mineral water. The King loves a good English cheese both at lunch and when he is dining quietly. He likes a choice, somewhat mild cigar, and it is not unusual for him to consume a dozen a day.

"He has very little leisure for reading beyond what he devotes to studying the daily papers, but when he takes up a book it is never a novel, but a volume of geographical exploration, and he is fond of studying the reports of the Geographical Society."

His Own.

"What's the baby crying for now?" asked the head of the house from the depth of his paper. "He wants his own way," answered the mother. "Well, if it's his," said the absent-minded man, "why don't you let him have it?"

BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine a mother can give her little ones. They are absolutely safe, being guaranteed by a government analyst to contain neither opiates, narcotics or other harmful drugs. They are good for all children from the newborn babe to the growing child. They cure constipation, indigestion, expel worms, break up colds and make teething easy. In fact they are a cure for all the minor ills of little ones and a box should always be kept in the house as a safeguard against sudden attacks of stomach or bowel troubles. Mrs. J. P. Richard, St. Norbert, N.B., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets all that is claimed for them. My baby suffered from stomach and bowels

THE SPIRIT OF THE SHIP.

When the Engine Stops There Goes Out All Life.

To the uninitiated, the engines of any steamer are noisy, tiresome, bewildering. And yet every component, every note of that great harmony, has a special meaning for the engineer; moreover, he can detect the smallest dissonance at once. So finely attuned to the music does the ear become, declares the author of "Letters from an Ocean Tramp," that the dropping of a hammer in the stoke-hole, the rattling of a chain on deck, the rocking of a barrel in the stores makes the engineer jump.

It is the same with the eye. It is even the same with the hand. We can tell in an instant if a bearing has warmed ever so slightly beyond its legitimate temperature. And so it is difficult to know "which is the potter and which is the pot." The man and the machine are inextricably associated, and their reactions, one upon the other, are infinite. It is this extraordinary intimacy, this ceaseless vigilance and proximity, that gives the marine engineer such an advantage over all other men, with whom endurance and resource must accompany responsibility.

I remember arguing once with a matter-of-fact apprentice in the shop concerning the suburbs as suitable for such as he. He was not convinced. "There!" he said, slapping the shelf above his bench. "That's where I'd like ter sleep. All yer gotter do at six o'clock is roll off and turn to." Well, that is just what he would get at sea. In most steamers the engineer walks out of the mess-room, bath-room or berth, into an alleyway on either side of the engine platform. The heat of the engines becomes part of his environment. He sleeps with it pulsing in his ears, so that if she slows or stops he opens his eyes.

It is a point of honor among us to know every kink and crotchet of day-to-day working. If a joint starts "blowing" ever so little away up in some obscure corner of our little kingdom, we know of it within an hour or two. One would think we were a mothers' meeting discussing our babies, to hear the grave tittle-tattle concerning the inevitable weakness of engines that passes over the mess-room table.

The propeller is our religion. When it drops away, as it sometimes does, there goes out from that ship all life, all motion. Even as the mass of metal plunges downward, and as the frenzied engineer rushes through blinding steam and water to stop the maddened engines in their panic rush, the spirit of the vessel goes out of her in a great sigh. With dampened ash-pits her fires blacken and go out, the idle steering-engine clanks and rattles as the useless rudder tugs at her chains, and the crew tell in whispers how it happened just like that on the Gypsy Queen, out of Sunderland, or the Gerald Dorr, out of Antwerp. All of which is not to be learned in the study at home.

Cramps at Night Require Prompt Remedy

Agonizing Pain Prevented by Keeping Nerviline Handy On the Shelf.

A Case in Point Illustrated.

Deadly cramps—the symptoms are not to be mistaken. Suddenly and without warning the patient experiences such agony in the stomach as to contort the countenance and cause him to cry aloud for help.

Then it is that the wonderful power of Nerviline can make itself felt—it cures so quickly.

"Last summer I was stricken with a frightful attack of cramps. I feared the pain in my stomach would kill me. "My eyes bulged out and the veins in my forehead stood out like whipcords.

"My cries attracted a neighbor, who came to my assistance, and in a moment or two handed me half a teaspoonful of Nerviline in some sweetened water.

"It seemed as if an angel had charmed away the pain. In ten seconds I was well. Nerviline has a wonderful name in this locality, and is considered best for cramps, diarrhoea, flatulence, stomach and bowel disorders. I urge all my friends to use Nerviline.

"MANLEY M. LEGARDE,
"Williamsburg."

No home is safe or can afford to miss the manifold advantages of having Nerviline on hand in case of accident or emergent sickness. Large family size bottles of Nerviline, 50c.; trial size, 25c., all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Perfectly Simple.

Gladstone, the great English statesman, always took a keen interest in everything that related to rural life. The Tagliché Rundschau tells of one of the earliest manifestations of that interest.

When still a very small boy, Gladstone was visiting with his parents at a country estate. The owner of the estate showed the boy the farm-buildings and pastures.

The young Gladstone took a great interest in everything, but particularly in a large black bull.

"That is a very fine, strong animal, Master William," said the owner of the estate. "And he's only two years old."

"Why, how can you tell his age?" asked the boy.

"By his horns."

"By his horns?" the lad repeated, in an incredulous voice. He continued to stare thoughtfully at suddenly his face I under-

WATERY BLISTERS INTENSELY ITCHY

Between Fingers. Spread to Tips. Would Swell Up, Itch and Burn. Did Not Dare Put Hands in Water. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment Cured.

Carman, Manitoba.—"A breaking out between my fingers was the first trouble. It was very itchy and spread to my finger tips affecting the nails. It first appeared in watery blisters and they were so intensely itchy I scratched them and let the water out making sores. They would swell up, itch and burn and finally the nails would loosen and come off. I spent many sleepless nights. I did not dare to put my hands in water except to wash them.

"I kept using ointments, ——; Ointment, but was not cured. Sometimes the remedies would help a little but I was not free from it altogether. I was that way for nine years trying everything. I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for them and before I had used them half a dozen times I noticed an improvement. By washing with the Cuticura Soap and applying the Cuticura Ointment frequently I was cured in three months." (Signed) Miss Florence E. Sanderson, May 20, 1913.

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Ointment have afforded the most economical treatment for affections of the skin and scalp that torture, itch, burn, scale and destroy sleep. A single set is often sufficient. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

CURIOUS HOTEL CUSTOMS.

Strange Rules Prevail in Some Scotch Houses.

In an Edinburgh hotel the bar counter contains a slot, into which each visitor who is heard to swear must drop a penny, and a notice to that effect is displayed. These pennies are at intervals collected and sent to aid the funds of one of the local institutions, says London Tit-Bits.

A curious custom prevails at an hotel in Dumfries. In one of the public rooms there is an armchair which was often occupied by Robert Burns, the Scottish national poet. Any one who enters the room and seats himself in this chair is expected to "stand treat" to all present, when the memory of the bard is drunk.

At Aberdeen, in a temperance hotel, each visitor, on signing his name in the hotel book, is desired also to exhibit his signature to a card testifying that he is a teetotaler and will not bring any intoxicants into the hotel. In a Glasgow hotel it is the custom weekly, on Sundays, to go round the various rooms and take a subscription on behalf of one of the city charities. In another Glasgow hotel the proprietor, religiously inclined, holds divine service each Sunday at noon, to which all the boarders are invited. At several of the large hotels in the north of Scotland the guests are beguiled from their slumbers each day by the playing of the bagpipes, while in an hotel in Inverness a posthorn is employed for this same purpose.

His Opportunity.

"Well, did he pay you?" asked the wife of a dentist who had been to collect a bill for a full set of false teeth that he had made for a man almost a year before. "Pay me?" growled the dentist. "Not only did he refuse to pay me, but he actually had the effrontery to gnash at me—with my teeth."

Weary Tiredness Changed to Vigor

That Played-Out Feeling Was Quickly Remedied and Health Restored.

Story of a Merchant Who Almost Lost His Business and His Health Through Neglecting Early Symptoms of Disease.

"My life for years has been of sedentary character," writes T. B. Titchfield, head of a well known firm in Buckingham. "Nine hours every day I spent at office work and took exercise only on Sunday. I disregarded the symptoms of ill-health, which were all too apparent to my family. I grew thin, then pale, and before long I was jaundiced—eyes and skin were yellow, my strength and nerve energy were lowered, and I was quite unfitted for business. In the morning a lightness in the head, particularly when I bent over, made me very worried about my health. Most of the laxative medicines I found weakening, and knowing that I had to be at business every day I neglected myself rather than risk further weakness. Of course I grew worse, but by a happy chance I began to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I was forcibly struck by the fact that they neither caused griping nor nausea, and it seemed incredible that pills could tone, cleanse and regulate the system without causing any unpleasant after effects. Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted with me just as gentle as nature—they gave new life to my liver, strengthened my stomach, and won me back to perfect good health. My skin is clear, dizziness has disappeared, and my appetite, strength, spirits are perfect."

Refuse anything offered you instead of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are sure to cure. Sold in 25c. boxes, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

ADVENTURES OF A SLEEPER.

Tells His Experience of a Night With Mosquitoes.

Richard Brinsley Sheridan said that had the fleas of a certain bed on which he once slept been unanimous, they could easily have pushed him out. Arthur T. Johnson, who writes of a camping trip in his book, "California, An Englishman's Impressions," says that had the mosquitoes that attacked him one night been unanimous in their attentions, he thinks he must have perished. Mr. Johnson continues:

All that night did I lie awake, the suffering prey of legions of these pernicious pests. "Dopes" I had long ago given up as entirely impotent to deal with the foe; the stronger the smell, the better they appeared to like it. With yards of cheese-cloth I now endeavored to parry their assaults, only to find the old truth verified, that one mosquito on the wrong side of the net is more venomous than a hundred when there is no net at all. I smoked until I could smoke no longer. I remembered the midges of Lakeport, how they so obligingly committed suicide by casting themselves into the flames, and lit a fire in the vain hope that the mosquitoes might be equally accommodating. But the taste of imported blood was far too good for them to dream of doing anything half so foolish. The fire only attracted more. For every one I slew, a hundred to avenge its death. My hands and arms tingled to the elbows, my neck and face were swollen and aflame. I buried myself in my blankets, but that only made the venom of the demons still more irritating; besides, it was so hot and sultry that the lightest covering was as much as I could bear. Sounds of the distress of others came to me; and there was a satisfaction, however feeble, in feeling that I was not suffering in solitude. Not before the brief twilight of dawn had announced the sun did the pests depart.

At the next camping-place there were no mosquitoes to speak of. Still, I was not permitted to have the restful night I desired, for no sooner had I lain down than I was serenaded by a playful kitten. Whether it was the mere desire for company that brought her out of the barley barn to me, or whether she was attracted by my hairy blanket, I know not. But she persisted in dancing about on my recumbent body, and catching imaginary moths with fore paws, like a juggler with his balls. I put her to flight; but she only enjoyed the fun, and returned to her capers as soon as I had lain down. She toyed with my hair and clawed at my blanket. While the buggy whip was in my hand she kept a safe distance, only to return with fresh vigor just as I was passing off to sleep. Ultimately, a more desperate determination to get rid of the pest possessed me. When a very small boy I once, with the best intentions in the world, attempted to wash a cat under the scullery tap. That cat fled and never returned. The memory of the episode stirred me to make a final effort to put this one to flight with a bucket of cold water.

But I could not catch her. She had the light-hearted, wanton spirit of a butterfly, the slipperiness of an eel. At length, however, after a considerable time spent in stalking, I managed to give her a fairly successful douche. But before I had got comfortably settled again, she was back, and, perched on my shoulder, actually began to lick herself with her tongue. I was beaten. She had come as near to my ear as she well could, to do her toilet; and as the night grew colder, I dragged some folds of my tent over my head, and finally went to sleep to the monotonous tune of that scraping, insistent tongue.

Carlyle once told of a lawsuit pending in Scotland affecting the succession to a great estate of which he had known something. The case depended upon a family secret known only to one old servant, who refused to reveal it. A kirk minister was sent to tell her that she must speak on peril of her soul. "Peril of my soul!" she said. "And would ye put the honor of an auld Scottish family in competition with the soul of a poor creature like me?"

MRS. A. SAICH, of Cannington Manor, Sask., Writes:—"My brother suffered severely from eczema. The sores were very extensive, and burned like coals into his flesh. Zam-Buk took out all the fire, and quickly gave him ease. Within three weeks of commencing with Zam-Buk treatment, every sore had been cured."

This is but one of the many letters we are constantly receiving from people who have proved the healing powers of Zam-Buk. For eczema, piles, sores, burns, cuts and all skin troubles there is nothing like this wonderful balm. No skin disease should be considered incurable until Zam-Buk has been tried.

THE SORREL WIG

By ELIZABETH WEED

Dear old motherly Mrs. Cruikshank was all heart. She took me into her house at the time of my mother's death and cared for me. She said it was because she was lonely, her son being a sailor and away from her nearly all the time, and that I was very good to stay with her and all that. It was no use to combat her as to this, and I saw that to remind her continually of my obligation distressed her, so I let her have her say in the matter. She was a funny little body, full of crotchets, and one must humor them.

Shortly before Mrs. Cruikshank took me in her son Albert sailed on a voyage, to be gone three years. I was seventeen then, just the age to be thinking of a lover, and his photograph hanging in the parlor caught my fancy. It represented a boy of eighteen in sailor costume, his collar rolling away from his neck, his hair tumbled and a frank, fearless face. The old lady never tired of talking to me about him and one day said to me:

"If you'll be a good girl and stay with me till he comes back, perhaps I'll give him to you—if you want him."

I smiled at this way of putting it and told her that any girl who wouldn't want such a fine looking fellow as that wouldn't deserve to have a husband at all.

When the time came round for Bert to be coming home he wrote his mother that he had been promoted to be first mate and he hoped it wouldn't be long before he would have a ship of his own. His mother read me this part of the letter with every appearance that she considered me interested in it on my own account, and I didn't disturb her in her opinion.

As bad luck would have it, several months before Bert's return I was attacked by a fever which nearly carried me off. If I was obliged to Mrs. Cruikshank before the obligation was now increased a hundredfold, for she hung over me as if I had been her own daughter and the only one at that.

Alas! When the fever left me it took my hair with it, leaving me as bald as a billiard ball. True, my hair began to grow again and just before Albert's arrival was about half an inch long all over my head. I could see that this troubled Mrs. Cruikshank immensely, for my hair was my most attractive feature, and without it I at least considered myself a very homely girl. She declared that I was more attractive than ever, but since my loss troubled me it must be hidden till the hair grew again to its wonted length—I would wear a wig.

Mrs. Cruikshank went to the city one day to procure the article and came home with one whose color was unique. The nearest word by which to describe it is sorrel. I told the good lady that it was beautiful, which comforted her greatly, for she said it had been offered to her for half price and she feared the reduction was owing to its color. I assured her that it matched my complexion exactly.

By the time Bert arrived I was up and about. Every now and then I would catch sight of myself in a mirror and would be astonished, even shocked, at my appearance. My pallor was heightened by my wig, and the appearance was like an old woman who had been trying to make herself look young. But I refrained from saying a derogatory word to the mother of the boy whom I was to attract. Indeed, I pretended to be very much pleased with myself.

The result was what might have been expected. Mrs. Cruikshank had mentioned me in her letters to her son, commending me for a beauty, and had unfortunately spoken of my "tresses" as my chief physical attraction. When he met me he was so astonished at the color of my head covering that his eyes were glued to it in a fixed stare. Then he shook hands with me, but there was no warmth in his grip. It was plain to both his mother and me that he had met with a great disappointment.

After remaining at home a few days submitting to his mother's caresses he made an excuse to get away to the city, saying that he must go on business for the ship. I could see that his mother was greatly disappointed at the ill success of her plan for keeping him at home by offering me as an attraction. He said he would be away a month, and on his return would sail again. His mother resigned herself to what she could not help, and we were left alone.

One night when we had gone to bed there came a rap at the front door. Getting out of bed I donned a dressing gown and without putting on my wig went downstairs with a lighted candle to see what was wanted. Opening the door there stood Bert.

As at our first meeting his gaze was fixed upon my hair, but now my own hair, and instead of disappointment I saw admiration. My hair is naturally kinky, and it was now long enough to stand in little ripples.

"For heaven's sake!" he exclaimed. "What's become of the sorrel?"

I burst into a laugh, and called to his mother that her boy had returned.

Bert's manner toward me was completely changed. He did not sail as expected, having been offered a ship of his own, and when he did sail he took his mother and his wife with him, I being the wife. It is needless to say that the old lady was delighted, and as for me—well, I was by no means distressed.

IN THE MAZE.

WHAT a crisscross maze is life,
Take it any way you choose,
In the never ending strife
As you gain and as you lose!
Luck is with you now and then
As you hurry for your goal,
Twisting through the maze again,
You are pitched into a hole.

Out of it you scramble up,
Hoping to do mighty deeds.
Still of sorrow you must sup
Ere your budding hope succeeds.
How you struggle, how you groan,
As you buckle to your task
Just to make success your own,
Just in fortune's smile to bask!

But it isn't all a frost.
There are seasons to be gay.
Hope is never wholly lost.
Joys are blooming on your way.
There's a path to your success.
You will find it after while
If you seek with cheerfulness
And you don't forget to smile.

Too Much.

Tommy, having disposed of three helpings of sausage and doughnuts, sat mournfully regarding his empty plate.

Observing his pensive expression, Aunt Sarah kindly asked, "Tommy, won't you have some more doughnuts?"

"No'm!" the poor lad replied with feeling emphasis, "I don't want them I got now!"

His Humble Desire.

"Will you object to my weighing myself?" said a meek-looking man to his wife as they stood near a weighing machine on the platform of a railway station.

"What do you want to weigh yourself for?" she asked sharply.

"Only to see, dear, if you would allow me to have my own weigh for once!"—London Answers.

The First Corset.

The first corset—not counting ancient modifications of Grecian bone and girdle—was introduced into France by Catherine de Medici. It was a strange affair and fashioned after the style of a knight's cuirass. The framework was entirely of iron, and the velvet, which decorated the exterior only, served to hide a frightful and cumbersome article of torture.

Deceitful.

Burglar (who is suddenly interrupted by the owner of the house)—Well, if that isn't the limit! What do you mean by writing on your door, 'Out of town until Sunday?'

In Danger.

By, oh, Baby Bunting!
Daddy's gone a-hunting.
Out of season hunting quail,
Daddy may bring up in jail.

A Suggestion for Progressive Merchants

The brisk, fall selling season is now on, and you are asking the public, through the advertising columns of this and other newspapers, to come to your store and reap the benefit of your weeks of designing, planning and careful purchasing.

Among the merchandise you offer none creates greater interest in the public mind, and none is offered perhaps with greater assurance of all round satisfaction than those articles of national reputation which have been made popular by the makers themselves through careful newspaper advertising in this community.

We suggest that you advise with other makers from whom you buy your merchandise in order that they too may know and appreciate the value—to you and to them—of having the public demand their product in preference to any other.

Good newspapers like THE REVIEW will do more to create this demand than any other agency you know of, as your experience has doubtless proved to...

FINIS.

EVERYTHING must have an end.
Same as a beginning.
There's a close, you may depend,
To the longest inning.
Artist, draw a headstone here.
No; you need not shed a tear.

Random rimes, however punk
Or however clever,
Take it from your old friend Dunk,
Can't run on forever.
Some day there must come a stop
To the most prolific crop.

Writing poems to the trade,
If the trade's a glutton,
Is, I'm very much afraid,
Much like cutting mutton
Or like sawing wood, we'll say;
Better yet, like baling hay.

It's a grind, you may depend.
Ask some gifted writer
Who you call your dearest friend
If the task is lighter
Than the job of throwing coal
In some ever hungry hole.

Not without regret we come
To the final winding.
But the joy bells are not dumb
At the thought of grinding
Out no more the gibe or song.
Reader, gentle one, so long!

More Than One Way.

"I need a new party gown, but I hate to ask my husband for it."

"I'll tell you what to do."

"Say on."

"Tell him the cost of living is so high that you owe the grocer a large sum."

"That's no lie. Say on."

"And that the grocer's wife is to be at the next party and if she sees you looking shabby—you know."

Her Method.

"Have you seen Mayme today?"

"Not today."

"Thursday is Clara's birthday."

"Well?"

"Mayme is getting up a surprise on her."

"I knew Mayme would get even with Clara for saying she couldn't sing."

Able Executor.

"Has your club president executive ability?"

"Fine."

"That's good."

"Indeed it is. Why, she has cut off the heads of every aspirant for her position for the last three years."

Not Poetical.

"Don't you just love the moonlight, Mr. Myers?"

"Moonlight?"

"Yes; so soft and mellow, you know."

"Oh, yes; to be sure. And mighty fine for coon hunting too!"

Mean.

"Have you seen Belle's latest photograph?"

"No. I haven't called there lately."

"Clara has one and is showing it to every one who calls."

"Is it as bad as that?"

Make Your Own Guess.

"How about Brady's honesty?"

"Well, he's been in the legislature and is too rich and lazy to dispute you, no matter what you say about him."

For All Bad Times.

Suppose your candidate got lost,
Be thankful just the same
That you can have a president
On which to lay the blame.

Shade Trees Are Your Property

The following bulletin is from the Forestry Branch at Ottawa showing the rights of property owners to trees on streets:

"In legislation for the protection of shade and street trees, the Province of Ontario sets a good example for the rest of the Dominion. Under the tree planting act of the Province of Ontario trees planted or left standing on the public highways (and also on the toll roads) become the property of the owner of the land adjacent to the highway and nearest to such trees. Thus any company or individual destroying or damaging in any way (even tying a horse to) such trees without the owner's consent is liable to a fine not to exceed $25.00 and costs, or imprisonment for not more than thirty days, half of the fine to go to the informant. Telephone companies who, in the stringing of wires, very often seriously injure and mutilate such trees, are apt to justify themselves to the property-owners by asserting their legal right to do such "pruning" because of established precedent. In this case no such practise, however long it has been tolerated by the property-holders, becomes legally justifiable, and such companies are just as liable for damages the last time they injure the trees as they are the first time. However long a wire may have been attached to a tree, the owner, if he has property in the tree, can compel its removal.

While even the owner may not remove shade trees on the highways without the consent of the municipal council, yet, on the other hand, not even the municipal council may remove any live trees without the consent of the owner of the property in front of which the tree stands unless such tree is within thirty feet of other trees, and even then the owner must be given at least three days' notice, and can demand compensation if he has planted and protected such tree.

The property owner who is aware of his rights in these respects will take greater interest in and greater care of the trees bordering the highway opposite his property. He will also have more incentive to plant shade trees.

A Revival in Sheep Breeding

In a recent number of Farm and Dairy Mr. John Campbell, of Woodville, the veteran sheep-breeder, gives his opinions why the recent tariff revision will mean quite as much for sheepmen as it will for farmers feeding beef cattle. In the course of an interesting letter Mr. Campbell says:

President Wilson's aim in his tariff revision is to lessen the cost of food to the American worker and saddle the monopolists' fortunes with income taxation in order to secure the necessary revenue. The question arises: Will the President's aim be realized? If the American is to get cheaper mutton and lamb, how can we benefit at the same time? To me it is now, as it has always been, a question easily answered. The wide open ports, free to all the world's trade, will surely result in lower prices to the people, who are content to buy whatever can be secured at the least cost.

To the writer it is as clear as daylight on a bright day that we in sending our surplus sheep—and especially lambs—to the American markets will get a large share of the benefits resulting from free entry. There are two good reasons. We produce a superior quality. American tourists in northern Ontario are always loud in their praise of Canadian lamb. Butchers' wagons in New York are placarded with "Canadian Lamb and Mutton," large enough to be seen across a square, bearing testimony to the excellence of our productions.

We should also profit by our nearness to the leading American markets. We will have an open door to cater to of 90,000,000 consumers, in addition to our own smaller population. Can any sane person for a moment suppose that our chances for better prices are not more certain when we have 90,000,000 of consumers at our doors ready to take our surplus—free as the air we breathe?

That the free entry of live stock is a decided benefit was clearly illustrated yesterday at a friend's auction sale of ordinary stock. Cows made up to $74, calves from two months to six months made $20.50 to $33.50, while yearling steers brought $72.50 each, equal to $7.50 a cwt. live weight. Grade breeding ewes made $13; ewe lambs $8.50 and $9 each, while the bunch of wether lambs made $7.50 each. That at least $5 was added to the value of every cattle beast, and $2 to $3 each for the ewes and lambs was a self-evident fact. It was fully demonstrated when shippers to the Toronto market were the buyers of both the steers and wether lambs, which were only of a class to be found on any well-ordered farm.

While the sheep industry has been and still is suffering from the uncertainty of the past year, yet the outlook for strong revival in the business was never brighter.

Unto You, Young Man, We Write

It has been asserted that every man can live within the limit of his income; and of the average young man at least it is doubtless true. At all events the necessaries of life are very cheap and very small, indeed, must be the wage that will not permit a young man to support life soberly and decently. It is the luxuries that come high, the unnecessary cigars, the indulgence in liquors, the questionable entertainments, the betting, the card playing, trying to ape those in better circumstances. These are the things for which young men generally go into debt for, not for the necessaries of life. For the "husk of swine" verily, that mortgage themselves, souls and bodies. For the sake of gratifying his vanity of dressing as well as others who have more than double his means; by wishing to appear what he calls as up-to-date as his friends or boon companions, many excuses of Esau, whose necessity was at last real. His wants are imaginary, and their gratification only serves to create an army of unlawful desires, which drag him lower and lower into the slough of debt, despondency and degradation, until manhood, honor, hope, enthusiasm, self respect—all that makes life dear—goes out in darkness. "A contented mind is a contented feast," but a feast that can never be enjoyed by the victim to debt.

What a Great Man Said to the Great Canadian People

Parisian Sage is a discovery of a celebrated scientist, who spent the best years of his life perfecting this great hair tonic.

In giving his recipe to the Canadian people he said: "Parisian Sage is the most delightful hair dressing in the world." It cures dandruff by killing the germs that infest the roots of the hair; it stops falling hair; it gives vigor and strength to the hair roots. T.G. Whitfield sells Parisian Sage in a large fifty cent bottle—and guarantees it to do all that is claimed for it, or your money is refunded. It stops falling hair, dandruff, itching scalp and restores life and beauty to dull faded hair in two weeks.

Her Great Love;

Or, A Struggle For a Heart

CHAPTER XXVI.

She rose and got a bottle—Bobby opened it—and she filled the glasses of the players. Then she leaned over Trevor's cards, just dealt, and touched them with the slip taper finger of her left hand; with her right she smoothed the soft dark hair from her forehead.

Trevor looked up at her and caught her hand, held it for a moment, then pressed it to his lips. Bobby saw the action, but Morgan Thorpe did not, or appeared not to see it.

She pouted, withdrew her hand slowly, and went back to her place.

A moment later Trevor flung down his cards.

"Lost!" he said. "Was it doubles or quits?"

"It was," replied Morgan Thorpe. "Lucky I played that king, Trevor."

"Yes," snarled Trevor. "It was almost as if you knew I held the queen."

Thorpe laughed.

"Wasn't it? A mere fluke on my part; a rare piece of luck."

Trevor pushed some bank-notes across the table, drank a draught of champagne, and rose suddenly, nearly upsetting the table.

"I'm done for to-night," he said, roughly.

He went toward the fire and stood glowering at it, his hands thrust in his pockets.

"And so you don't play, eh, Deane?" he said, looking down at Bobby with a sneer.

"No," said Bobby; "I've chucked it. As I said, I can't afford it."

"You will come again soon?" Laura murmured, as she pressed his hand—and left.

Trevor stood staring at the fire for a few minutes, then he looked over his shoulder at Morgan Thorpe, who was lighting a cigarette.

"Thorpe, I want to speak to your sister," he said.

Morgan Thorpe looked over his cigarette and raised his brows.

"Certainly, my dear Trevor!" he said, pleasantly. "I'll efface myself instanter!"

When the door had closed upon him, Trevor looked down at the woman sitting over the fire. His eyes were bloodshot, they and his red hair accentuating the pallor of his face.

"Laura, I want to speak to you," he said. "I'm sick of this."

She looked up at him with a faint smile.

"It's about played out as far as I am concerned," he went on in a strained voice. "I can't stand it any longer—and hang it, what's more, I won't!"

"Why use such language; what is the matter?" she murmured.

"Never mind my language," he retorted. "It expresses my feelings. Laura, you know I love you, you know that I loved you— Bah! what's the use of saying it? You know it all. Will you be my wife? I want your answer. I'm sick of playing this game, sick of seeing you flirting with that—that boy. If you care for me enough to be my wife, say so. I can't and won't wait any longer!"

His eyes shone redly, his lips were set and dry, and his voice rasped huskily. For a moment the woman was daunted. She had played this man as an angler plays a trout; now tightening, now loosening the line. And now that he had come to the surface, lo! it was not a trout, but a shark, a dragon with gleaming teeth, a thing almost to be feared. She turned rather pale under her powder, but she smiled tenderly, as she murmured:

"You know I care for you—Ralph!"

"Do I?" he said. "But do I? I'm not so sure that I do. Sometimes I have half an idea that you—you have been fooling me, that—" The words were broken by his clinched teeth; his face grew red. Then, suddenly, his mood changed, and he flung himself on his knees beside her and gripped her hands. "Laura, for pity's sake, tell me the truth! If you love me, be my wife at once—at once! I can not, will not wait any longer. I am half mad with love for you; I am drifting to the devil while you—you keep me shilly-shallying. You know that you know that I am on the road to ruin; marry me and save me—if you love me. If you do not, then—then—I will go. Oh, Laura, have pity on me!"

His upturned face was distorted by passion, and suddenly his head fell until his face was hidden in her lap, his hands gripping her dress.

There was something terrible in his self-abandonment, terrible and pitiable, and most women would have been both terrified and pitying. But this woman had no heart, and was incapable of pity. The touch of fear which had assailed her passed away as he surrendered himself to his passion, and loathing and contempt took its place.

She looked down with a moue of contempt at the bowed red head, at the clinched hands, upon which the veins stood out in thick cords; but her voice was exquisitely tender and loving as she whispered:

"You know I love you, Ralph, and—and I will marry you if you wish it; if you think it wise to trust your life to mine so full of the sorrows of the past."

He raised his head, his face transfigured by relief, joy; and keeping his arm around her, he drew her down to him.

"Laura, my own!" he cried, hoarsely.

She suffered the embrace for a moment; then she gently let her lips to his hot forehead, then she slipped from his arms and rose.

"Go now, Ralph!" she said, caressing his hand. "You—you almost frighten me! Forgive me, dearest, forgive me! If you knew how I love you!"

"Perhaps I do." She smiled at him, and let her head rest on his breast for a moment. "But, Ralph, we—we must not be rash. You will write."

His face darkened instantly.

"Wait! Why should we?" he began.

"Foolish boy, I do not mean for long; for—for a month."

"A fortnight," he said, eagerly. "Three weeks, then!"

She made a gesture of assent.

"Go now, dearest!"

She had to endure his parting embrace, with a tender, smiling affectation of returning it; but what it cost her was expressed by the cry of disgust which broke from her lips almost before he was out of hearing.

Morgan Thorpe, coming in, found her crouching over the fire, and wiping her lips, her arms, which his lips had touched, with her handkerchief, as if to free them from some stain.

"Bah!" she exclaimed, with a gesture of loathing. "Why did you not come in sooner and save me from that—that savage!"

"What is the matter?" he asked. "Has Trevor—"

"Yes," she said, between her teeth. "He has been making love, has asked me to be his wife." She gave a low laugh of derision. "And insisted upon an answer."

"And what did you say?" he asked.

She laughed again.

"Yes."

He started.

"By Jove! Couldn't you have—"

"No, I couldn't!" she broke in, with something like a snarl. She did not look very beautiful at that moment. "I couldn't put him off. I was—yes—afraid. He behaved like a madman. Look at my hair! I hate all men; you are all brutes!"

Morgan Thorpe watched her with a cunning interest.

"This is indeed serious," he said again. "Look here, Laura, this chap isn't like most of the others; he's a nasty one to tackle. We shall have to make a bolt for it."

She shrugged her white shoulders indifferently.

"Yes, we must fold up our tents like the Arabs, and silently steal away," he said. "It's lucky he didn't break out before."

"Yes; I suppose you've plucked him pretty well by this time?" she said, callously.

Morgan Thorpe nodded quite as callously.

"Pretty near," he assented. "And come to think of it, it's as well that we should make a move. The other boy has grown shy, and there's nothing to be made out of him."

She yawned with profound indifference.

"He's not so bad as the other," she said. "He's only a fool. Trevor is a brute and a savage as well."

"All the more reason for giving him the slip," said Morgan Thorpe. "We could clear out in a few days. By a stroke of luck, I have not paid the last quarter's rent." He poured out some wine and took it to her, and she drank it at a draught, and he followed her example. "I'm not so sure that the other boy, Deane, is quite exhausted," he said, musingly. "He took up his I. O. U.'s to-night, and he is good for another hundred or two. Look here, Laura, here's an idea." He came over to the fire and leaned against the mantelpiece, looking down at her. "He won't play any more, I'm certain of that. But couldn't we run a grand coup? How would it be if you were to work him for a biggish sum, say, a couple of hundred pounds?"

She yawned.

"How?"

"It's easy enough. You can do anything with him."

"I'm not so sure," she said, reflectively. "He's not such a fool as you think him, and I fancy he is getting a trifle suspicious. I saw him looking at me curiously when I was making the sign behind Trevor to-night."

"Oh! Then it's time we wound up these operations. But look here; I'll show you the way to draw that couple of hundreds, my dear girl. You go to his rooms one night. Woman in great distress, tearful 'make-up,' with dark rings round the eyes. You've come to him—risking compromising yourself and all that—because you are in great trouble. Threatened with ruin unless you can obtain a couple of hundred pounds. Have come to him because he is the closest, truest friend you have. See? He can save you by just putting his hand to a little bill. You may not want to use it, will in all probability return it to him in the morning, but in any case it will save you from ruin and despair. See?"

He rolled off the nefarious scheme fluently, and she listened with her head on one side, her eyes fixed on the fire. Then she laughed.

"I dare say I could manage that," she said.

"Of course," he said, with a laugh. "The boy's in love with you. You take him unawares; give him no time to think. You can promise him anything—seeing that we start in the morning."

She yawned. There was no compunction in her nature, no sense of shame. She had been an adventuress all her life, and a successful one—simply because of that absence of compunction and shame.

"Very well," she said. "Oh, yes; I can do it easily enough. But mind, I take that two hundred, Morgan."

His face fell.

"My dear Laura! Think of my expenses."

She looked at him with a glint of anger in her eyes.

"I take that two hundred," she repeated, emphatically. "You have plenty of money; I know that; and I've wondered sometimes where you get it. You have had more than you got from Trevor and Deane."

He changed color, and she laughed contemptuously.

"Don't trouble to lie," she said coolly. "I shouldn't believe you. And I don't care how you get it. All I know is that I mean to have this haul. And do you know how I am going to spend it? Why, on another diamond bracelet? My dear, you might get it on credit."

"No; I'm going to spend it on detectives. I am going to find out that husband of mine."

Mr. Morgan Thorpe emitted a sickly emile.

"My dear Laura, you know best; but is it worth while?"

"Yes!" she said, with sudden fury. "I mean to find him. You've tried—or pretended to—and have failed. I am going to try and I mean to succeed."

"My dear, why be angry with me? I hope you will succeed; though why you should want him, seeing that you hate him like poison—"

"Yes, you're right. I hate him like poison; and that's why I want him. I'm going to make life hell for him."

She rose and stood looking before her with eyes which blazed with a malignant fire; her lips were parted, showing her white, even teeth; her bowter showed almost yellow against her white face; her small hands were clinched tightly at her side.

Morgan Thorpe looked at her with a mixture of fear and admiration.

"Upon my soul, Laura, I don't envy h'm if you do find him," he said, with an uneasy laugh.

She drew a long breath.

"You'd have no cause to," she said, significantly, as she moved toward the door. "Tell me when you want to get that money. Good-night."

The next morning Mr. Morgan Thorpe began his preparations for a sudden and secret flight. Such preparations with gentlemen of Mr. Morgan Thorpe's character are beautifully simple. They consist in getting as many articles on credit as confiding and trustful tradesmen will supply. He bought a nice stock of clothes, some choice cigars, a few—but they were only—articles of jewelry; he borrowed as many five-pound notes as he could from men with whom he had scraped acquaintance.

It was "By Jove! I've left my purse at home! My dear fellow will you lend me a few pounds for to-night?" And at last, when the landlord of 31 Cardigan Terrace wrote demanding the rent by return post, Mr. Morgan Thorpe informed his sister that everything was ready for the exodus, and that she might bring off her grand coup against that young fool Deane.

She went up to her room after dinner, and locked the door, and in about an hour she came down and presented herself for approval, as it were.

Morgan Thorpe looked at her, as she stood before him, and uttered an exclamation of admiration. She was pale, there were dark rings round her eyes; but her expression was the highest achievement. She looked hunted, harassed, full of despair.

"By Jove! you ought to have gone on the stage, Laura!" he said, fervently. "You ought, indeed. Why, you'd melt a heart of stone with that face and—that look! Really, I think I should try for three instead of two hundred!"

She laughed, the heartless, callous laugh of the adventuress.

"Too high a sum would frighten my baby," she said. "Call a cab for me, Morgan. Here—give me a glass of champagne before I go."

He gave it her, still eyeing her with admiration.

"Perfect actress!" he murmured, ecstatically.

She laughed and nodded exultingly.

"Oh, I shall play the part all right. It's easy enough with such an innocent child as he is."

"If Trevor comes I'll have told him that you're in bed with an headache."

She arrested the second glass on its way to her lips, and exclaimed:

"Thank goodness, I shall escape from him! He was here yesterday, and—well, that was a hard part to play. It was as much as I could do to keep from screaming out 'I hate you—hate you! Take your hands off me!'"

Morgan Thorpe laughed.

"By this time to-morrow you will have put a good many miles between you and that too ardent lover of youre, my dear," he said.

He called a cab, and, closely veiled, she entered and was driven off.

As she passed from the house to the cab, Trevor came round the corner. He saw her and recognized her, and he stood still for a moment, with astonishment. Then he went on to the house and knocked.

"Is Mrs. Dalton at home?" he asked, as coolly as he could.

"Yes, sir," replied the French maid, blandly; "but madame is confined to her room with a bad headache."

She saw him wince and start, saw the blood leave his face slowly.

"I'm sorry," he said, curtly. "Tell her—But never mind. Good-night, Marie."

He went down the steps and walked a few paces. Then he ran. The cab was still in sight. At the end of the street he hailed, and jumped into a hansom.

"Follow that cab!" he said. "Keep out of sight if you can. Follow it, and mind you don't lose sight of it!"

He crushed an oath between his teeth.

Gaunt stood with his back to the door which he had closed on Decima—and waited. He heard the frou-frou of a woman's dress; the other door opened, there came the faint perfume which he remembered so well and loathed so bitterly, and the woman, his wife, entered.

The lamp was low, and shaded by a deep crimson shade, the firelight flickered. In the faint light she did not in the first moment or two of her entrance see him. She moved to the fire, carefully threw back the hood of her fur cape, and held out her hands to the fire; and he, motionless and in silence, watched her.

He had once loved, or persuaded himself that he had loved, this woman. He could have laughed aloud with bitter self-scorn and mockery.

She warmed her hands daintily, glanced at the clock, yawned, put up her hands to smooth the hair which the hood had ruffled, then turned and looked round the room, and—saw him.

For a moment she did not recognize him, and uttered a faint cry of surprise. Then with a shriller, though strangely restressed cry, she moved toward him, her head projected, her eyes fixed on him. She looked as she moved, like an exquisitely beautiful snake. She was within a couple of paces before the words—

"It is you!" broke from her parted lips.

Gaunt, white and rigid, made a gesture of assent.

"Yes," he said. "Why are you here?"

She drew a long breath, as if she were sinking, then she came nearer, and stared at him as she broke into a laugh—a laugh of triumph, of derision.

"It is you!" she repeated. "You—my husband! Well—it's too good to be true! You—you here! How did you come? Why?" She looked round the room, as if amazed and perplexed, and then back at him. Her beautiful face flushed beneath the paint; her eyes shone like stars within the artistically drawn shadows. It was the face of a mask suddenly, hideously endued with life.

"This is my home—my rooms," he said. His own voice seemed to him as if it belonged to some one speaking at a great distance.

"Your—your rooms!" she repeated, dully. Then her eyes glittered, and she laughed. "Yours! Then—then—you are Lord Gaunt!"

"I am Lord Gaunt—yes," he said, as dully and mechanically as before.

She put her hand to her forehead and then to her throat, as if her thoughts that were crowding on her were suffocating her.

"You are Lord Gaunt! These rooms are yours! You are a nobleman—a swell—and my husband!"

"Yes," he said in exactly the same lifeless tone. "I am your husband."

She leaned against the back of a chair and breathed heavily, then she laughed.

"I have found you—found you at last! And you are Lord Gaunt! And I am—yes, I must be, of course—Lady Gaunt! Lady Gaunt! Well, this was worth living for!"

A FISH-EATING SPIDER.

Measured About Three Inches When Its Legs Were Extended.

It was when I lived in Greytown, Natal, writes the Rev. N. Abraham in Nature. One day I was catching small fish and acquatic insects for an aquarium, and I was using a small net in a shallow stream. I happened to see on the edge of the water a fine spider, which I captured.

On reaching home, I placed my specimen in a large aquarium, where I had a number of small fish. The spider measured about three inches when its legs were extended; the body is small, but the legs are long. After hiding in the rockwork of the aquarium for some time, it took up a very interesting position. It rested two legs on a stone, and let the other six float on the water, well spread out. The ends of the six legs thus commanded a well defined area of water.

I merely took notice of its attitude, and left it to its own devices. After a few minutes my servant boy came into my study to say that the spider was eating one of my pet fish. I at once went to see what had happened. The spider was on top of the rockwork, and it held in its grip a beautiful little fish, about four times its own weight. I was startled. How could this spider, which has no power to swim, catch a lively, quick-swimming fish? It seemed to clutch the fish as a cat clutches a mouse. It soon began to devour its catch, and before long nothing was left of the fish but its back-bone.

I was now eager to find out how the spider caught the fish. That night about eleven o'clock, I sat down by the aquarium to watch the spider. It had taken up its position on a piece of stone, where the water was not deep, and had thrown out its long legs over the water. Their extremities rested on the surface, and made little depressions on it, but did not break the "water skin." The tarsi of two posterior legs firmly held to a piece of rock, just about at water-level; the whole body was well over the water, and the head was about in the centre of the cordon of legs, very near to the surface of the water.

After watching for some time, I saw a small fish swim toward the stone and pass under the outstretch legs of the spider. The latter made a swift and sudden plunge. Its long legs, head and body went entirely under the water, the legs were thrown round the fish with wonderful rapidity, and in a moment the powerful fangs pierced its body. The spider at once brought its catch to the rocks, and began to eat it.

A Late Guess.

During a case of severe illness, the wife of the sick man asked a neighbor to go over to the next farm, and buy ten cents' worth of onions to make poultices.

When the caller asked for onions, the farmer looked perplexed, and declared that he had no onions, never did have any, and did not even know what an onion was! The neighbor remarked that he was almost certain that he had seen onions in the garden.

"No, you are mistaken, stranger," the farmer answered. "I got pertaters, termaters, red dishes, green punkins, but no onions."

After the man had gone onionless away, the farmer turned to his wife, and said, "Hettie, I wonder if that man didn't mean inyins?"

$10,000 BANK ROBBERY.

The Union Bank at Hazelton, B.C., Entered By Masked Men.

A despatch from Hazelton, B.C., says: Five masked men robbed the Union Bank at New Hazelton, four miles east of Hazelton, Tuesday night, shot the cashier and escaped with $10,000 after a rifle battle with citizens. A special train was sent west in hope of intercepting the bandits, as it was believed they escaped down the Skeena River. The cashier, returning from dinner, surprised the robbers at work. One robber opened fire, the bullet striking the cashier between the eyes. The wound is not serious. Citizens, attracted by the shot, hurried to the bank just as the robbers were leaving. The fleeing men engaged in a running battle with their pursuers until they found shelter in the timber on the edge of the town. Six men suspected of being implicated in the robbery were arrested between Hazelton and New Hazelton.

ECHOES OF THE GREAT STORM

Ghouls Rob Bodies of Wrecked Seamen—List of the Casualties—Losses and Insurance

Terrible as has been the greatest of the Great Lakes tragedies, with the disappearance of scores of vessels and the loss of perhaps two hundred men, it has been left for man to make the horror more horrible. Steamboat officials returned from Port Franks with information that will be pieced in the hands of the Attorney-General's Department, of a nature that casts a reflection upon this Province. Not only have they the names of men they found casting wreckage away from the death-strewn shore, but they have under surveillance one man who is alleged to have in his possession $800 taken from a foreigner's belt found on shore, and the names of men who are believed to have even gone so far as to rob the dead.

The ghouls found three victims of the storm in or near a lifeboat of the Regina. Two of the men were visible, but one body lay in the bottom of the boat under water, and this fact saved his body from being desecrated.

The Work of the Body-Looters

was limited by a creek, for they could not get across this, and it was on the other side of it that the other eight bodies were found. On one of the other bodies was found $113, while all the others had money on them. The victims who were washed up west of the creek had their pockets rifled, the perpetrators of the vile crime not even leaving anything by which the men might be identified.

Those who are stealing wreckage are making it more difficult for steamship men and county officers to identify the dead, as lifebuoys have been taken off victims and mixed up, and names on boats taken away. It is therefore hard to locate the boats from which the wreckage comes. The wreckage that is being taken away consists of all kinds of merchandise, as well as parts of the wrecked vessels.

An order has been issued warning all persons that those retaining wreckage in their possession would be prosecuted to the full extent of the law, and the penalty is three years' imprisonment. Later the steamship men went to Sarnia, where the police were notified, and steps taken to protect the coast.

Kindness of Rescuers.

In contrast to the actions of persons who took advantage of this saddest of tragedies are the people who so kindly assisted in the rescue of the survivors of the Northern Queen, and who took them into their homes suffering from the terrible exposure through which they had gone.

ENGINEER'S THRILLING TALE.

The gallant fight of 22 staunch seamen to save their lives and after that the Northern Queen, is told in a graphic manner by second engineer Charles Ryan.

"I was working in the engine hold as usual on Sunday afternoon when the storm came up," Ryan said. "The Northern Queen was caught in the trough of the sea and to save her from plunging to the bottom, Captain Crawford turned her nose up the lake. Within an hour the waves, lashed to tremendous heights, pounded over us, stripping some of the upper works and smashing in through the ports.

"Water poured into my quarters and we were compelled to make for other parts of the ship. All hatches were down, but the flood came through and killed most of our fires. A couple of the boilers were still in shape, but we had not steam enough for power. We made the most of it till 6 o'clock that night.

"Snow then came down and our mast raked the clouds that swept over us. Men strapped on their life belts, but stayed below as much as possible to avoid being washed overboard.

Lost the Rudder.

"The boat rolled and the coal crashed down out of the bunkers on top of us. Captain Crawford knew that to attempt to make Port Huron would send us to the bottom, but we were anxious to get to any place of safety. We agreed that the best plan was to strike back into the teeth of the gale.

"No one slept that night, and along in the morning we lost our rudder, and knew that we were up against it. Before 4 o'clock the Queen veered around and dropped into the trough of the sea. We dropped both anchors, but they dragged. Then she caught and held fast. The heavy sea ran over us and threatened to pound her to pieces, but she stayed with it. Then with a sudden lurch she shivered and crunched from stem to stem, slacked back an instant, and with the next leaped her cable's length. There was a terrible crash and we knew she had lost both anchors.

Yawls Smashed.

"In the meantime the yawls with one exception were smashed and torn from their davits. The snow fell in clouds, through which it was impossible to see more than a few feet, and in the roar of the gale the siren could not be heard any distance.

"Later the sky cleared, but the wind kept up and dashed us about. We could not get out of the trough, and were drifting rapidly before the wind. When daybreak came we found ourselves a mile off Port Frank. A couple of hours later the ship's keel went on a shoal and it felt like the finish. A big sea was still running, and time and again she eased off, raised by the waves only to go harder than before.

Marooned.

"Finally she set fast and after that we got only the side lash as she rolled in the heavy seas. Monday night we found ourselves without fire and practically without food and soaked through and shivering we groped our way about the vessel. We hunted about and got a little coal and tried to make fires to keep warm, but it was a tough job.

"All night waves buffeted us and Tuesday at daybreak it still looked bad. We were then 1,000 yards from the beach. Late in the afternoon the gale eased off a little and the captain ordered our only remaining yawl over the starboard side forward.

Cable Broke.

"She dropped into the sea and 10 men plunged into her. A line had been made fast that she might be hauled back to take the rest of us ashore. The cable snapped and we were left marooned.

"A number of people from the village and a couple of fishermen were attracted out and were prepared to help them in. They plunged into the water and sent up a cheer we could hear when the men were landed.

"Later in the afternoon we tied a wire cable to a big crate of goods and cast it overboard. The crate found its way in, and, after a couple of hours was within twenty-five yards of the beach. A couple of the men landed and got the crate before she was carried out by the undertow. They were both knocked out but they got our line.

"The yawl was made fast and two fishermen came with her to the boat. The next load off left only five men on board the Northern Queen. They found matters easier at night. I came off with the second trip. The captain and a couple of men stayed to the finish."

WORKS ALL DAY

And Studies at Night on Grape-Nuts Food.

Some of the world's great men have worked during the day and studied evenings to fit themselves for greater things. But it requires a good constitution generally to do this.

A man was able to keep it up with ease after he had learned the sustaining power of Grape-Nuts, although he had failed in health before he changed his food supply. He says:

"Three years ago I had a severe attack of stomach trouble which left me unable to eat anything but bread and water.

"The nervous strain at my office from 6 A. M. to 6 P. M. and improper foods caused my health to fail rapidly. Cereal and so-called "Foods" were tried without benefit until I saw Grape-Nuts mentioned in the paper.

"In hopeless desperation I tried this food and at once gained strength, flesh and appetite. I am now able to work all day, at the office and study at night, without the nervous exhaustion that was usual before I tried Grape-Nuts.

"It leaves me strengthened, refreshed, satisfied; nerves quieted and toned up, body and brain waste restored. I would have been a living skeleton, or more likely a dead one by this time, if it had not been for Grape-Nuts."

1913 FISH WORTH $34,000,000

A Falling Off In the Catch Is Reported From Northern British Columbia

A despatch from Ottawa says: Fish to the value of $34,000,000 were caught in Canadian waters in the last fiscal year, according to figures just compiled by Mr. W. A. Found, Superintendent of Fisheries. This is a slight decrease from the previous year. Reports with respect to the season now closing, however, indicate a catch fully equal in value to that of the last year, and the $35,000,000 mark may, quite possibly, be reached.

In British Columbia this is what is called "big" year in the salmon industry, and the catch on the Fraser River was up to expectations, while large quantities of halibut were taken. In the Northern waters of the province, however, a falling off occurred.

The Prairie Provinces' fisheries have had a good average season devoid of any particular feature. Ontario provincially administers its own fisheries and does not report to Ottawa, but the catch is unofficially indicated to have been fully up to the mark.

In Quebec the season has been a fair one, while in the Maritime Provinces it is classified as good. Cod easily leads all other fish in respect to the volume of the catch. The lobster industry is active. Recommendations by the Shell Fish Commission designed to foster the business and the propagation of the fish, are under the consideration of Hon. J. D. Hazen.

PRESENT INSURANCE RATES.

English Companies Are Heavy Losers By the Storm.

A despatch from London, England, says: The Canadian Press understands that considerable misgivings have sprung up among London underwriters, in connection with the storm on the Great Lakes. They feel that in adopting the present rates on vessels trading on the Canadian lakes they have not taken into account the possibilities of such serious gales as that which has just taken place. Roughly, their loss is estimated at £1,500,000. Judging by later cables, however, this figure may considerably increase.

MADOC, NOVEMBER 20, 1913

Malone

Hunting season is over for another year and fair success is reported by all the hunters.

Mr. Bert McCann was so successful as to secure a fine bear. Congratulations, Bert.

The Nickle Hunting Camp has broken up after another successful season.

Mr. Wm. Gawley, who has been hunting for a few days near St. Ola, returned home Monday with his due allowance.

No hunting accidents have been reported here this year although a close one was registered. It was only due to the inaccurate aim of one of our would be but careless young hunters that a resident of this place owes his life. Such gross carelessness is unnecessary, and this incident should be a lesson not only to young inexperienced rattle-brained hunters but to parents who allow their children to hunt with a gun before they have reached the age when they think twice before they act once. The old law of "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth" should be in vogue during hunting season until such incidents would cease to happen.

The Malone bridge has been rebuilt and is now safe to cross with any fair load. The work was done under the supervision of Mr. Geo. Tompkins.

Gordineer's bridge is now open to the public, and the filling in will be completed this week.

Mr. Alfred Phillips, of Bellview, spent a few days here last week renewing old acquaintances.

Mr. McCullough, of Marmora, has purchased the timber on the wild lot owned by Mr. Barney Derry, and has a gang of men at work cutting logs.

Misses Tillie and Carrie Martin, of Ivanhoe, are visiting relatives here.

Mr. Thos. Moffatt and family spent Sunday the guests of Mr. T. H. Derry.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Arthurs, of Point Anne, and Mrs. J. Ellis, of Marmora, made a flying trip through this part last week.

Mr. Gordaneer, of Bay City, Mich., who has been visiting friends and relatives here, has returned to his home.

Wedding bells are ringing.

The Rev. Mr. Smart, of Queensboro circuit, preached on this field last Sabbath at Blair's, McCoy's and Fox's, while Rev. Mr. Ross took charge of anniversary services at Hart's church on the Queensboro work.

Services will be held next Sabbath at Blair's at 10.30, McCoy's at 2.30 and Union at 7.30. The subject will be "The Silent Builders of an Eternal Structure."

Don't shun a business man and refuse to trade with him when you have cash simply because you owe him for past accommodations. The way to get even with him for his kindness is to patronize him when you have money and pay for what you want.

There is always someone somewhere who is anxious to buy what you have to sell, someone who has just the article you want to buy. To complete a deal each must know the other's wants, and there is no better way to make these wants known than through the "want" columns of the NORTH HASTINGS REVIEW.

The funeral of the late Miss Flossie M. Love, who was the last surviving child of Mr. Adam Love, of Madoc township, took place on Friday last at St. John's church. The remains were later interred at Hazzard's cemetery. Miss Love was in her 24th year. She had been in impaired health for some time, latterly weakened daily.

Notice of entertainments, socials, etc., at which an admission fee is charged or a special collection is taken, will be charged at the regular advertising rates. Notices of religious or other meetings, the object of which is the benefit of the community, and not for personal or sectarian interest of gain, will be published free of charge.

A mean looking letterhead has lost many a dollar for business men. If a man is to be judged by the coat he wears he is also to be judged by the letterheads he uses. An artistic and business-like letterhead has frequently been a basis of credit. It may be looked upon as a good investment, and you will never miss it by investing in the neat work this office can give you.

The people who have so much sympathy for those who have gone beyond all earthly help, might use a little of it in everyday life to a good and excellent purpose. The idea of kicking people when alive and then for a person to weep over their grave when dead is one reason why the world is no better today. Speak your kind words to the living and when you are dead you need not care what is said of you.

Sunday School Convention

The report of the S. S. Convention at Ottawa, held at Hazzard's church on Nov. 11th, and given by some of Centre Hastings' delegates, was an intellectual treat. Owing to the unfavorable weather and the short time for announcement, the attendance was not as large as it would otherwise have been, but Rev. J. W. Bick, of Ivanhoe, was on time and by his splendid, earnest report of different subjects discussed at the Convention brought to his hearers the fact that he had caught a vision of the Kingdom—and carried it home to share with others. Miss M. Whytock, of Madoc, treated her subjects of report with her usual clear-cut impressive style. Her object lesson on the blackboard was fine, and was highly appreciated. Mrs. G. Harris, of Hazzard's Corners, discussed the business side of the Convention. The choir, assisted by Mr. D. L. Fleming, of Ivanhoe, and Misses Pym and Whytock, of Madoc, gave the gospel songs used by Prof. Excell at the Convention. Miss Pym's, solo "Any Stars," was thoroughly enjoyed. The audience departed well pleased with the report.

In the Police Court

John Poll, a foreigner, who has been working in the Canadian Sulphur Ore Co. mine at Queensboro, was, on Thursday of last week, arrested for forgery. It appears that the mining company had left a few signed cheques in their book. Poll becoming aware of this, broke into the office, filled in three cheques and left three dummy ones in their places. One cheque for $100.00 was presented at the Dominion Bank and cashed. He then went into Mr. A. Kincaid's store and bought a suit-case for $3.75 and presented cheque No. 2 for $33.33, receiving in cash $29.58. Proceeding to Mr. A. D. Weir's store he purchased a pair of high rubber boots at $4.50 and tendered cheque No. 3 for $39.45, receiving in cash $34.95. The three cheques totalled $181.78. As soon as the company discovered that the cheques had been stolen the police were at once notified, with the result that Poll was caught at Crookston, six miles from Madoc. He was brought back and came up before Magistrate Casement Thursday night for a preliminary hearing. He was lodged in jail over night and taken to Belleville on Friday morning, where he will come up for trial at a future date.

Blessing of New Bell For St. Henry's Church, Queensboro

On Tuesday afternoon, November 11th, His Grace Archbishop Spratt, D.D., of Kingston, arrived in Madoc and accompanied by Rev. Fathers Quinn of Tweed, Murtagh of Marmora, McDonald of Kingston, Warnock of Maynooth, O'Riordan of Madoc, proceeded to Queensboro to bless the new bell for the Catholic church there. After the ceremony His Grace spoke to the people on the history and ancient uses of church bells. History told us the first use of the church bell was to proclaim the mystery of the Incarnation, hence it is rung three times a day to keep before our minds that God became man. Another ancient use of the church bell was to call the people to be present at the sacrifice of the New Law, and to call the monks at midnight to recite the Divine Office. All these uses of the church bell are beautifully expressed by the inscriptions on the bell, namely: "I proclaim the Incarnation, I call the clergy and people to mass and other divine services, I bewail the dead, in all I praise God." The Archbishop congratulated pastor and people on procuring such a fine bell, then His Grace and the clergy and the people present rang the bell for the first time. It was cast by the McShane Bell Foundry Co., Baltimore, Md., and weighs with stand one thousand and twelve pounds. Next day it was erected to its place in the tower by Messrs. Laton, and proved to be a fine sweet-toned bell.—COM.

Permodelle

Permanent Modelling Material for Children

Modelling has become a favorite pastime, owing to its educational value, and it is therefore all-important that the materials used should be satisfactory in every way.

This is the more necessary as it is largely in the hands of children, who can hardly be expected to exercise the care and discretion of their seniors.

"Permodelle" meets these requirements, and may be accepted as quite safe. It will not adhere to the hands, it will not stain, grease or soil the most delicate fabric.

The heat of the hands is sufficient to render it plastic, and when moulded it sets hard and retains the acquired shape, and permanently if desired, but can be re-softened and re-modelled any number of times.

"Permodelle" is produced in a variety of fast colors. The coloring materials, too, are quite harmless.

The qualities of "Permodelle" and, above all, its absolute safety, induce us to believe that it will acquire well-deserved and popular favor.

Boxes containing twelve colors, price 15c.

Selected Recipes.

Baked Apples.—Select apples of uniform size, wash, core, arrange in baking dish and fill the cavities with sugar, butter and spices or with plain sugar, as preferred. Bake and serve with whipped cream.

Pressed Beef.—Take the thin pieces of pickled beef and boil until well done, then pick it to pieces, season with pepper, salt and allspice. Put in a cloth, press with a heavy weight. When ready to serve, slice thin.

Baked Ham.—Soak the ham overnight in cold water, remove to kettle of fresh water and cook enough so that the skin is easily removed, trim, press a couple of dozen cloves in the fat side and end, rub with brown sugar and place in fireless cooker between hot stones to bake.

Cornmeal Mush.—Heat the water to the boiling temperature and when it bubbles sprinkle cornmeal in very slowly, stirring constantly until the mixture thickens—about fifteen minutes. Put in fireless cooker and cook ten or more hours. When ready to serve heat very hot.

Salad Surprise.—Select turnips of one size, peel carefully, cut off top and scoop out the inside. To this add salt and English walnuts, mix thoroughly with French dressing made with a liberal quantity of olive oil; refill turnip cups, plant mint cherry on top and serve on lettuce leaves.

Mock Plum Pudding.—To a half-pound of gingersnaps add a half teaspoonful of baking powder, soak thoroughly in a pint of milk, mix in two well-beaten eggs, a tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of sugar, half a cup of raisins, quarter of a cup of citron, half a cup of nuts; bake in slow oven and serve hot with vanilla sauce.

Cherry Come Again.—Cream one rounding tablespoonful of butter and one tablespoonful of white of egg with 1½ cupfuls of confectioner's sugar. Work in one tablespoonful of cherry juice and one of preserved cherries chopped fine, mix with stiffly beaten white of two eggs, mound on cold dish and place whole cherries on top.

Chocolate.—Three squares chocolate, one-half cup sugar, salt (few grains), two cups boiling water, six cups scalded milk. To the melted chocolate add sugar, salt and water. Stir until smooth, heat to the boiling point and place in the fireless cooker. Allow it to remain over night and when ready to serve add milk; heat, but do not boil. The long cooking develops a pleasing flavor.

Veal Birds.—Cut veal in pieces about two inches square, pound each piece flat and twice as large as before. Season with salt and pepper and lay upon it a leaf of parsley and a strip of bacon, roll and skewer with wooden toothpicks. Roll in flour and brown in butter and drippings. Remove birds to the kettle and make a brown gravy in the pan. Pour this over the birds and heat to boiling and put in the fireless cooker for several hours. Serve in a casserole.

Sprink Chicken.—A hen, even an old one, may be made to do duty as a spring chicken if treated as follows: Select a hen, not too fat, dress carefully, skin and place in a pan, cover with water in which a pinch of soda has been dissolved, boil until tender, remove each peace, sprinkle with salt and pepper, roll in cracker dust or cornmeal if preferred, and fry in a hot pan with lard and butter, half and half. After the chicken is browned, remove, add salt, pepper and a litle water to the gravy in the pan, and when this comes to a boil add a cup of rich milk and boil for two minutes. Serve with the chicken.

Don't hang too many pictures in a room.

Don't hang inharmonious pictures together, as rich oil paintings and austere etchings.

Don't use too many gold frames.

Don't hang a glass-covered picture where the light will cause it to glare.

Don't use white enamel frames. They suggest bathtubs.

Don't frame or hang anything because it is "cute." Such pictures have no lasting value.

Don't hang fruit, fish or game pictures anywhere but in the dining room.

Don't countenance crayon portraits or gaudy chromos.

Hints for the Home.

A good black ink mixed with white of egg will restore the color of black kid shoes or gloves.

If milk is kept in a large, shallow basin it will remain sweet for a longer time than if kept in a deep jug.

To whiten cloths which have become yellow soak in buttermilk for one week, then wash in the usual way.

To preserve fruit can rubbers cover with dry flour. Any rubber goods may be preserved for years in this way.

Rice may be substituted for macaroni as a dinner dish. Prepare it with grated cheese and bake it in the oven.

A few drops of ammonia in the water in which silver is washed will keep it bright for a long time without cleaning.

If a napkin is wrung out of hot water and wrapped round sandwiches and they are put into a cool storeroom, they will remain as moist as when first spread.

Leftover Foodstuffs.

Soup should never be covered closely and then set away to cool. Fermentation will take place very quickly if the soup is covered while warm. If onions or other strong vegetables are to be kept, let them cool first and then put in covered jars. Crusts and cut slices of bread should be dried out in the warming oven. Do not keep the crumbs, made by running crusts through the food chopper, long in used jars. The shortening in the bread is very apt to make the crumbs rancid and the flavor will be imparted to the fresh meat, vegetables or other dishes in which the crumbs are used.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, NOVEMBER 23.

Lesson VIII.—Joshua the New Leader. Josh. 1. 1-9. Golden Text, Josh. 1.9.

Verse 1. After the death of Moses—The Israelites are still encamped in the land of Moab, east of the lowest Jordan. In Deut. 34, 8 we are told that "the children of Israel wept for Moses in the plains of Moab thirty days," after which it appears that Joshua took immediate command of all the administrative affairs of the nation.

Jehovah spake—It is not necessary to think of an audible, verbal communication from Jehovah to Joshua in this connection. Joshua had long been second in command as the assistant of Moses, and the situation naturally demanded that he take up immediately the reins of administration and proceed to carry out the plans of Moses, which were very familiar to him. His duty, therefore, was most clear, and as he contemplated the work before him, and the best means of carrying it out, he was conscious that the work intrusted to him was placed upon him by Jehovah, and there was borne in on his heart and mind by the Divine Spirit a strong and overwhelming conviction that he should at once "arise" and "go over this Jordan," and lead the people of Israel unto the land which Jehovah had promised them. God speaks to men to-day as truly and as clearly as he did to Joshua; yet we do not expect the audible, verbal communication now—nor need we think of such a communication here. That the language of the sacred historian is figurative and anthropomorphic does not detract from the value of his narrative. On the cohtrary, it adds much to its forcefulness and beauty and gives to this ancient record a new and more enduring meaning and value.

Moses' minister—For forty years, ever since the departure of the Israelites from Egypt, Joshua had been the principal assistant and adviser to Moses.

3. Every place . . . to you have I given it—A supreme challenge to conquest and faith.

As I spake unto Moses—The promise referred to is found in Deut. 11. 24, which reads: "Every place whereon the sole of your foot shall tread shall be yours: from the wilderness, and Lebanon, from the river, the river Euphrates, even unto the hinder (western) sea shall be your border."

4. The boundaries of the land of promise, the new home of the redeemed nation, were to be the wilderness on the south, the lofty mountain ranges of Lebanon on the north, the great river, the river Euphrates, on the east, and the great sea toward the going down of the sun, that is, the Mediterranean, on the west. For other specific designations of these boundaries, compare also the following references: Gen. 15. 18-21; Exod. 23. 31; Num. 34. 1-12.

The land of the Hittites—Northern Syria, extending westward into Asia Minor. The Hittites were neither Semites nor Aryans, but probably Mongolians, whom they resembled most nearly in physiognomy and dress. Their facial type is said still to persist in the peasantry of Cappadocia. Their most prosperous national period was from about B. C. 1600-700 after which latter date they were absorbed by the Assyrian empire.

5. As I was with Moses—The narrative is designed to impress upon the reader the sense that the continuity of the nation and of its high purpose was independent of, and not broken by, a change in the person of the leader.

I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee—A promise quoted by the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews: "Be ye free from the love of money; content with such things as ye have: for himself hath said, I will in no wise fail thee, neither will I in any wise forsake thee" (Heb. 13. 5). Compare also Deut. 31. 6, 8; 1 Chron. 28. 20.

7. Observe to do according to all the law—The law is to be strictly and carefully observed if the great work to which Joshua has been called is to be successfully accomplished. He is to "read, mark, and inwardly digest" that law, carrying out its provisions to the letter.

Have good success — Literally, "deal wisely."

8. This book of the law—This obviously refers to the 'law' described in Deut. 31, 9 as written by Moses and delivered to the Levites and elders. That it embraces a considerable nucleus of the Pentateuchal legislation (including, of course, the bulk of Exod. 20-23) few critics would deny."—Dummelow.

9. Have not I commanded thee?—For similar emphasis on the personal leadership of Jehovah, compare Deut. 31. 7, 8, 23.

HERE IS A BONNIE, BUXOM, BOUNCING BRIDE.

She is Only 19 and Weighs Just 568 Pounds.

The photo shows a young Englishwoman just married in London, whose weight at the time of her wedding was 40 stone 8 pounds (568 lbs.). She is only nineteen years old, and we leave it to the reader's imagination as to what she will look like when fully matured. She is living quite peaceably in private life.

WEARY AND HEAVY LADEN

I Have a Yoke, Jesus Said, Which Will Enable You to Stand Any Strain, Do Any Work.

"For my yoke is easy and my burden is light."—Matthew, xi., 30.

There are few Bible texts, I believe, which are more generally misunderstood than these lines from the most beautiful and appealing speech which has been recorded from the lips of Jesus. Calling unto all the "weary and heavy laden" to come unto him, he promised to give them rest if they would take his "yoke" upon them and learn of him. "For my yoke is easy," he said, "and my burden is light."

To nine people out of ten this word "yoke" is understood to imply some kind of discipline, restriction or humiliation. They have a picture of the colt darting freely about in the pasture, and then the tamed horse in harness. They see the steer running wild over the prairies, and then the ox bound fast to the plough. To take Jesus' yoke upon us is to extirpate our natural desires, forfeit our personal freedom, yield ourselves to the yoke of pietistic discipline. It is to do, in some modern way, what the mediaeval Catholic did when he left the world and entered the confining walls of the monastery; or what the Puritan did when he put on his garb of sombre hue, and denied himself the innocent pleasures of a merry heart. Just how such a "yoke" as this can fairly be described as "easy" or such a "burden" as "light" has been answered with as little adequacy as the parallel question as to how such a "yoke" or "burden" is to bring "rest" to the person assuming it.

Destroy All Things Beautiful,

If we would really understand just what Jesus had in mind when He uttered this saying let us return in imagination to the days of His young manhood, when the Nazarene was a carpenter. Let us picture Him standing by the open door of His shop and seeing a pair of oxen toiling up the hill with a heavy load, their straining haunches, heaving sides and tired eyes giving every indication of exhaustion and pain. Instantly, with that ready compassion for distress which was so characteristic of His nature, the young man leaps to the panting animals and quickly points out to their troubled driver that the yokes are badly made and in part defective. Then He snatches them from the necks of the oxen, carries them to His bench for repair and readjustment and, this done, lays them again upon their shoulders. And lo! the oxen toss their heads into the air with a new freedom and set themselves to their task with a fresh vigor. No longer do they strain at their load. The yoke is easy, and therefore the burden is light!

It is such an experience as this which Jesus had in mind when He spoke these immortal words. He was here, as nearly always, speaking in parable, and drawing His parable from the everyday life which He and His hearers knew so well. He was here pointing out that every one of us, like the yoked oxen, must bear a burden, and oftentimes, therefore,

Be Heavy Laden and Weary.

Assuming that the people to whom He was speaking well understood—as many of us to-day do not!—that yokes are placed upon beasts of burden not that they may be tamed or fettered or restricted, but that they may be equipped to carry their loads easily and effectively. He naturally enough used this figure to express His idea that we must be similarly equipped spiritually if we are to bear the burdens of human life. Learn My lesson of love, heed My message of spiritual life, follow in My pathway of service and you will find a yoke which will enable you to bear every burden which the world may lay upon you. If you are "weary and heavy laden," "come to me and I will give you rest." "My yoke is easy." Take it upon you, and behold, your burden will become light!—Rev. John Haynes Holmes.

Doings in Europe.

Lady Grace of Westmore, the beautiful and mysterious English suffragist who went to Berlin a week ago to get 1,000,000 men to sign a petition for votes for women, has found German officialdom proof against the strains of her violin and her demure manner.

She intended to storm the German ministers, including the imperial chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, and enlist their sympathies by methods diametrically opposed to those employed by Mrs. Pankhurst, but Lady Grace admits failure and she has given up the attempt. The most notable signature she captured was that of Poguod, the daring French aviator.

Lady Grace of Westmore, as she is known here, refuses to admit her identity. She admits that neither the name nor the title she is using is hers, but declares she has a right to a higher title. She intimates that she is a marchioness and has shown a photograph of Conway Castle as her ancestral home.

Birth Rate Almost Nothing.

There is an extraordinary social phenomenon at Montreaux-les-Mines, France, where the birth rate has fallen lower in the last three years than in 100 years in the remainder of France. The cause given is the democratic-socialistic trend of thought following two strikes. The town once had a birth rate of thirty-seven per thousand. It has now one per thousand.

The first strike, against the mine owners' interference with miners' opinions in politics, lasted sixteen days and was decided in the miners' favor. Then the municipality became socialistic, and thus remains. The second strike, for an increase of pay, was lost after a three months' fight. It ruined the workers, who were obliged to capitulate.

Walking as a Punishment.

Prof. Roland has just devised an ingenious method of punishment for pupils who are idle, turbulent or undisciplined. Instead of making them remain in to write lines or do similar tasks, he makes them walk five miles. They are required to produce from their parents a certificate that the walk has been taken.

The professor is so pleased with the results obtained that he is recommending his method to other schoolmasters.

Uskub An Up-to-date Town.

It will astonish most people to learn that the Macedonian town of Uskub, of which the name was probably familiar to few until the place was taken and retaken by Servians, Turks and Bulgarians, has a system of street lighting by electricity.

The installation was almost finished in September last, just before the war broke out, and was completed and put into working order by the engineering staff of the Servian army when the town was taken. Since that time electric light has been installed in many private houses.

Uskub also has a horseshoe works, which was established in 1911, and produces the Turkish as well as various other styles of horseshoes. As soon as settled conditions prevail again the works propose to take up the manufacture of wire nails, for which the machinery has already been imported from Germany, and of ploughs.

King's Tribute to Warrior.

When King Alfonso and President Poincare were returning by train from Toledo to Madrid the King noticed a sword that Gen. Lyautey, the French military Governor of Morocco, was wearing. "Surely that is a sword with a history, General," he said. "It is not of modern design." "It belonged to my grandfather, sir," replied Gen Lyautey. "He was an officer in the army of Napoleon I." The General drew his sword and handed it to the king, who read out slowly the names of the great battles engraved on the blade, and kissed the blade gravely.

He then handed back the sword to Gen. Lyautey, who, deeply touched by the graceful act, saluted and returned it to its scabbard.

Buys a Church for $4.20.

The old church of Clairefontaine, just outside of Paris, which, although it dates from the eleventh century, was ouered for sale some months ago for the modest sum of $1, was just been sold to an official of the Public Works Department for $4.20. The old church was falling into ruin and the price of $1 was put upon it because the buyer would have to tear it down and cart it away, no easy job with the railway line at some distance.

About twelve years ago the church was declared no longer useful for its original purpose, and the wealthy parishioners of the village decided to build a new edifice, to which were taken most of the relics of the old building—doors, windows and commemorative tablets, even one which reads as follows:

"This church was constructed in honor of God and Notre Dame in the year 1100 by Simon, Comte de Montfort, son of Amaury the First, who was the son of King Robert."

The village kept for itself the entrance of stone in the Roman style, so the buyer, who, by the way, was the only bidder, gets only the "carcass" of the historic church for his $4.20.

Avoid Obesity in Children.

Mothers who are naturally proud of their fine plump babies will be surprised to learn that a fat infant is not necessarily a healthy one.

At a medical congress last week at the Hospital for Sick Children, Paris, presided over by Prof. Netter, Dr. Legendre of the Lariboisiere Hospital, asserted that when an infant becomes fat it is because the nourishment has been perverted from its proper use, probably from the result of hereditary predisposition.

An abnormal condition of the vascular glands frequently leads to obesity in children; the common belief that it is good to give infants as much as they can eat is wrong, said Dr. Leopold Levi. "It only develops infantile obesity, and is bad for the child. On the other hand, restricted alimentation is attended with the best results and muscular exercises are recommended as a cure for children who have put on too much flesh."

Swiss Embroidery Industry.

The demand for hand machine embroideries is diminishing from year to year in Switzerland, and the time is not far distant when hundreds of home embroiderers, owning and operating one or two hand machines, will have to exchange these for the schiffli model.

Most of the embroidery schools in the St. Gall district, nine in all, which aim thoroughly to train their pupils in the technique of embroidery manufacture and which formerly were unable to accommodate all the pupils, report now a big decline in the number of applications, claiming that young men are turning their attention to the schiffli machine.

The schiffli machine has not driven the hand machine out of existence—and that is never to be expected—but has rendered it of minor importance, and quite changed the character of the industry. The individual owners of hand machines — the cottage workers—have completely lost control, being reduced to work at stitch wages for the manufacturers.

It is worthy of note that the production of specialities, and particularly of metal and artificial silk embroideries, on schiffli machines is gaining rapidly. This class of goods has heretofore always been exclusively manufactured on hand machines.

Looked Familiar.

Dinah was a product of New Orleans, a big, plump "yaller girl" who could cook the finest dinners for miles around. One day a new butler appeared upon the scene, and Dinah's mistress noticed that she took a great interest in the man. At last her mistress could stand her curiosity no longer: "Dinah, do you know that new man?" Dinah took another long and scrutinizing look and then slowly and reminiscently replied: "Well, I dunno, Miss Alice; but I think he was ma fust husband!"

Fashion Hints

Bags of Silk and Beads.

A new sort of handbag is shown for use with street suits. It is made of silk and beads and at first sight seems too fragile for street wear. But it proves to be useful and durable as well as very attractive.

These bags are made in several shapes, but all are small and the colors are generally in neutral tones. One bag, of gray, is six sided, each panel or side ending in a point. The six points are joined to form the tip of the bag. Another bag, of soft, dull yellow, is foursided and the four sides are cut diagonally at the bottom and mitred together. Still other bags have three or two sides.

All of them have chain handles of gold or silver beads and are decorated with a two-inch band of the beads applied about half way from the top to the bottom. Below this band hangs a two or three-inch fringe of beads, gold and silver used together.

New Handkerchiefs.

Colored handkerchiefs are still in fashion, and the colors and materials in which they are made are both more vafied than ever before.

There are delightfully soft handkerchiefs made of crepe from Japan. They are made in two-color combinations. Sometimes the centre is white, and the hem blue, sometimes the centre is blue and the hem white, and sometimes the handkerchief is made of two shades of blue. Other colors, too, are used, and all of them are soft, rich colors that stand washing well.

The butterfly handkerchiefs are in keeping with the general liking for the butterfly that has pervaded the whole realm of dress. Half a dozen handkerchiefs are sold in a set, each embroidered with a big butterfly in one corner. Of course the six butterflies are all different. They are embroidered in white.

Gauze handkerchiefs are a novelty. It is a fine, firm gauze of which they are made, almost as fine as chiffon, but with much more stiffness and dressing than that material has. Each handkerchief is bordered with four or five stripes of color, about an inch from the narrow hemstitched hem. The stripes are in the form of little cords.

The wide-hemmed handkerchief is another novelty. The handkerchief is made of sheer linen, and the hem is an inch and a half wide. The hem is embroidered in the corner—with flowers and butterflies and wheat and birds and wreaths and any of the other symbols that are usually employed for handkerchief decoration. All the embroidery is kept off from the single thickness of linen and on the thick hem.

A well-known New Zealand [far]er tells a good story which Colo[nial] Life prints. One day a territo[rial] called at his house and engaged in conversation for some minutes. "I subsequently discovered," [said] the speaker, "that while he was [en]gaged me some of his mates made a raid on my fowlhouse, and 'bagged' the whole poultry run." In consideration of the farmer's generosity in saying nothing about the matter, the delinquents on their return home had their photographs taken and forwarded one to the farmer, apparently to remind him of the happy visit. "It was very good of kind of them," said the farmer, "and in order to show my deep appreciation of their thoughtfulness and sportsmanlike action I have had the photograph framed and hung in the fowlhouse."

THE HALF-SPEED MAN AND WOMAN

What It Means When You Feel "All Out of Sorts."

You know what it means to feel "all out of sorts." Most people have felt this way at some time. Nerves out of order, irritable, languid, depressed. An aching head, a fagged brain, appetite bad and digestion weak. With some people this condition comes and goes; with others it is chronic; they can't shake it off. It interferes with business, spoils recreation and robs life of all its joys. These men and women are only able to live and work at "half speed."

Half speed people have lost that abundant natural vitality which enables others to go "full-speed-ahead" through life. Their energy and nerve power have evaporated—they cannot work long without breaking down. The trouble is nerve weakness and is caused by poor, watery blood. You can begin to improve your condition to-day by taking Dr. William's Pink Pills. They make rich, red blood once more pulsate through your veins, and your nerves thrill with fresh vigor. Here is convincing evidence that new strength and full health can be had through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mr. Newton Mayhew, North Tryon, P. E. I., says: "I am a farmer and naturally have to work very hard. The result was that I found myself very much run down. My blood became thin and watery, and my muscles flabby. I took doctors treatment but it did not help me and I grew so weak that I could scarcely work at all. As I found the medical treatment was not helping me I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and in these I found the medicine I needed, as in a short time I was restored to my old health and vigor. I shall always recommend these pills to all sufferers."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers, or will be mailed, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

INCREASE OF WAGES.

Millions More Were Paid to Workers Last Year.

A report on the ascertained changes in the rates of wages and hours of labor in the United Kingdom in 1912 was issued recently by the British Board of Trade.

This states that after the period of depression in 1908-9 wages began to rise in sympathy with the improvement in trade and employment, but the movement was somewhat slow until about May last year. After that date the movement became more rapid, with the result that the number of workpeople whose wages were reported as increased during 1912 was in excess of that for any previous year, while the aggregate amount of their net weekly increase was exceeded twice only during the last 20 years, namely, in 1900 and 1907, both years of exceptional prosperity.

The number of workpeople reported as affected by changes in rates of wages last year was 1,818,-940. The advance represented an increase for 52 weeks of over £7,-000,000, but as the changes mostly took effect late in the year the actual increase in the wages bill was about £3,000,000, allocating the weekly advance of £139,000.

Coal mining accounted for £77,-000, engineering and shipbuilding £11,000, the textile trades £15,000, iron and steel manufactures £10,-000, and building trades £8,000.

The statistics given are exclusive of changes affecting agricultural laborers, railway servants and seamen. Reports received, however, indicated that agricultural laborers in a considerable number of districts had been granted advances of wages; also that the earnings of about half a million railway servants continued to rise, while seamen fully maintained the rate granted in the previous year.

Changes in the hours of labor affected 105,000 persons, whose weekly working time was reduced by 211,000 hours in the aggregate.

CLIMBING A MAGNETIC CHAIN

Remarkable Experiment With a Lifting Magnet.

A Berlin correspondent of the Scientific American describes an interesting experiment that was made at the works of one of the large German manufacturing firms with one of their lifting magnets.

A chain, fastened to the ground and carrying an iron ball at its free end, was raised to a vertical position by the approach of the great lifting magnet suspended from a crane.

The attraction of the magnet was so strong that the chain remained in a perfectly vertical position. A grown-up workman climbed up the chain without disturbing its rigidity in the least. The chain seemed to float in the air. The magnetic pull on the ball was greater than the gravitational pull on the man.

This remarkable experiment shows the enormous power of attraction exerted by the lifting magnets that are used in iron and steel works to carry about iron material of every description. The magnets enable the operator to seize iron material at any point desired, and convey it to any other point within the range of the crane. Incidentally, the use of lifting magnets has greatly diminished the risk of accidents in the moving of heavy masses of iron.

ILLS OF CHILDHOOD.

Every mother should be able to recognize the symptoms of the little ailments that attack her children. She should also be in a position to treat them promptly. To do this she should keep a supply of Baby's Own Tablets in the house at all times. The Tablets never fail to be of help to little ones. Mothers who are anxious for the welfare of her little ones will receive free for the asking a valuable little book on the care of infants and young children. Concerning the Tablets, Mrs. G. L. Bonham, St. George, Ont., says: "I can recommend Baby's Own Tablets as a safe and sure medicine for little ones. I have raised four babies with their aid and would not be without them." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MIXED METAPHORS.

Eminent British Statesmen and Politicians Make Them.

In the palmy days of spread-eagle oratory, when language was far more flowery and figurative than it is now, it took a cool head behind a vehement manner to steer a safe course among similes and metaphors. Absurdities were frequent, and laughter marred many a peroration; yet, carried along by the speaker's earnestness and fire in delivery, the most wildly ridiculous metaphore often passed unnoticed. At a memorial meeting in honor of one of the most famous of American orators—Wendell Phillips—a magniloquent speaker referred to the spirits of the great departed, which, on leaving this earth, "wend each its way, swifter than a winged eagle, loftier than a soaring falcon—sweeping across the mighty spaces of the heavens as a glorious comet sweep, rushing ever onward, forward and upward, to its goal in Abraham's bosom!"

Oratory of that type—even without the mixed metaphor—is a rare survival from the fashion of an earlier time. Eloquence is more restrained and less ornate nowadays. Yet even in the simpler style of our own time, public speakers of experience, as well as blunderers and beginners, occasionally slip up on their metaphors. Any schoolboy could correct the errors that some wide-awake English reporter has noted in the recent speeches of eminent British statesmen and politicians.

"We are told," said Mr. Walter Long, in a debate on an education bill, "that by such legislation the very heart of the country has been shaken to its uttermost foundations."

Mr. St. John Brodrick, in the House of Commons, talking of the mobilization of troops, declared that "among the many jarring notes heard in this House on military affairs, this subject at least must be regarded as an oasis."

Mr. Asquith, the premier, did better. He said that "redistribution is a thorny subject, which requires delicate handling or it will tread on some people's toes"; and it was Lord Curzon of Keddleston, former Viceroy of India, who declared optimistically:

"Though we are not out of the wood, we have a good ship."

Offensive Breath Caused Usually By Catarrh

A Simple Remedy Discovered That Cures Without Drugs.

The American people suffer more from Catarrh than from any other disease. It undermines more constitutions and creates more sickness than all other diseases combined. It is, therefore, very dangerous.

You can't successfully treat Catarrh by internal dosing—you must in some way send a purifying, healing agent through the breathing organs, so that the germs can be reached. This you do every time you inhale Catarrhozone. It's rich essences and healing balsams are breathed all through the nose, throat and lungs, and effectively destroy every trace of Catarrh. This is a proven fact.

I endorse Catarrhozone because I know of six bad cases of Catarrh, including my own, that it has cured. It is a sensible remedy because it is capable of going where the disease is. I believe it cures quicker than other remedies because it gets sooner to the source of the disease than anything else I know of. I had headaches, bad breath, and much stomach trouble associated with my Catarrh, but they have disappeared since using Catarrhozone, which keeps me free from colds, headaches, catarrh and all winter ills." OTTO E. KRAMER, Belleville, Ont.

Catarrhozone is needed in every home. Large size lasts 2 months, price $1.00; small size, 50c; trial size, 25c. At all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a diseased part, the cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming of fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Co. and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema!

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, or we will send free trial box if you send this advertisement and a 1c. stamp (to pay return postage). Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

BEVERAGES OF NATIONS.

Amount of Spirits Consumed in Different Countries.

Norwegians are one of the most temperate of Northern nations, consuming but 46½ pints of beer and 4½ of brandy per head of population.

The Dane drinks on the average 156 pints of beer, but little wine, and only 36 pints of brandy each year. The Swede manages to consume 84 pints of beer and 13 of spirits. The Russian drinks 7½ pints of vodka and the same amount of beer. The Frenchman, however, takes 160 pints of wine, 15 of beer, 48 of brandy. The Britisher soothes himself with 9 pints of whisky or gin, 3 of claret, and 228 of beer.

The Dutchman will drink 54 pints of beer and 12 of brandy. Taking every German province to obtain an average, it is found that the German consumes 187½ pints of beer, 10 of wine, and 9¼ of spirits. In Munich, however, the average amount per head rises to 850½ pints, being the highest of any province, while the lowest average obtains in the northern province of Alsatia. Here the inhabitants are satisfied with only 144 pints of beer per head.

The Italian is the least of all addicted to alcoholic beverages, taking only 3 pints of beer, 1¾ of alcoholic beverages, and 144 of wine per head.

UP-TO-DATE BATTLESHIP.

H.M.S. Queen Elizabeth Is the First Oil-Burning Warship.

H.M.S. Queen Elizabeth, the supership of the British navy, is the largest British battleship ever launched. Her design embodies some striking new features which make her the most up-to-date warship in the world.

She will, for example, be the first vessel to be armed to fight aircraft (a battery of specially designed guns are given her for this purpose) and to be protected against them as well, for in action all her crew will be under cover of a central battery, which gives overhead protection from dropping bombs, as well as side protection against gunfire.

Again, she will be the first ship to mount the new 15 inch guns, of which she is to carry four pairs. The offensive power of this weapon is enormous.

Her torpedoes, fired from four tubes, will be of the latest twenty-one inch pattern. Heated air propels them, and they have a long effective range, with double the speed of the older weapons. For speed and accuracy, in fact, there is no torpedo in existence like them.

She will burn oil fuel only, being the first battleship in the world to do this. It is anticipated that oil alone will enable her to maintain a steady twenty-eight knots per hour without any of the falling off and spurting up again that occurs in coal-burning ships.

Expected Death From Day to Day

Another Case Where Life Was Saved and Health Restored by Nerviline.

We have all read and heard of the agonies of sciatica, but only those who have been tortured by this dread malady can fully appreciate what it must mean to be cured after years of suffering.

It is because he feels it his solemn duty to tell to the world his faith in Nerviline that Victor P. Hires makes the following declaration. "For three years I was in the Royal Mail service, and in all kinds of weather had to meet the night trains. Dampness, cold, and exposure brought on sciatica that affected my left side. Sometimes an attack would come on that made me powerless to work. I was so nearly a complete cripple that I had to give up my job. I was in despair, completely cast down, because the money I had spent on trying to get well was wasted. I was speaking to my chemist one day, and he recommended 'Nerviline.' I had this good liniment rubbed on several times a day, and got relief. I continued this treatment four months and was cured. I have used all kinds of liniments, and can truthfully say that Nerviline is far stronger, more penetrating and infinitely better than anything else for relieving pain. I urge everyone with lumbago, neuralgia, rheumatism, or sciatica, to use Nerviline. I know it will cure them."

UNDERTAKING In All Its Branches

New Premises New Stock New Prices

Our ever-increasing trade has compelled us to secure more commodious quarters. We have now opened our new store, 3 floors 24x85 ft., over 6000 ft. floor space, packed with Furniture of every description. We have been planning for this change for months, and have purposely allowed our old stock to run nearly completely out, and are now opening with a practically new stock.

By making a careful study of Furniture conditions and buying when and where the prices were right we have got together the very best value in Furniture ever offered to the buying public in Ontario. We have also rearranged our Price List, and we purpose to give our customers better prices than can be secured at any of the towns or cities of the Province. Remember our old motto, "We will Not Be Undersold."

We beg to sincerely thank our many customers for their very liberal patronage in the past, and trust by fair dealing and right prices to merit a continuance of the same.

TO OUR DISTANT CUSTOMERS

We wish to say we are better than ever prepared to cater to your Furniture needs, and have completed arrangements whereby we can ship direct from the manufacturer to your nearest railway station, freight prepaid. Write, telephone or wire, and we will guarantee satisfaction.

We expect in the very near future to issue a most complete and up-to-date catalogue, giving full description and prices of all Furniture in stock.

Yours sincerely,

Both families have the sympathy of of the entire community.

In Loving Memory

Of Mrs. D. H. Vansickle, who died September 21st, 1913

We loved her, yes, we loved her
But Jesus loved her more,
And called our darling Grace
To yonder shing shore.

O what a sad, sad word, "Farewell!"
To speak with longing pain.
'Tis hard to live, but oh, how sweet
To die when death is gain.

Our loss is her eternal gain.
Our hearts with grief are riven,
But let us wipe our streaming eyes,
We know she's safe in Heaven.

Thou hast gone to dwell on high.
Thou hast gone to live with Jesus,
When we'll meet you bye and bye.

Selected by her sister.

Workmen's Compensation

Sir William Meredith, who has been working for the last three years on workmen's compensation, and who has travelled through many countries for the purpose of comparing the various systems in those countries, has placed his report in the hands of the government.

If the commissioner's draft and report are adopted the workmen of Ontario will be insured against accidents and from minor hurts that keep him from work more than seven days. He will be insured against disease arising from the industry in which he is engaged.

He will receive compensation equal to 55 per cent. of his wages. If he be the employee of a railway, telephone or electric light company his employer must compensate him.

In Sir William's report the principle is adopted that the industry must bear the whole burden of compensation.

Newspaper Publishers Form Organization

A new Association was formed in Belleville on Friday, November 14th, which is subsidiary to the Canadian Press Association. Proprietors and others who are connected with newspapers and printing offices in Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington counties and the city of Belleville met and formed an Association to be known as the Bay of Quinte Press Association. The officers selected were as follows:

Wedding Bells

HIGGINS—HENLEY

The home of Mrs. M. Henley, Bannockburn, was the scene of a quiet, but pretty, wedding on Wednesday evening, November 5th, when her granddaughter, M. Mae, was united in marriage to Mr. Ernest Higgins, of Gooderham, Rev. G. E. Ross officiating.

To the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Margaret Hunter, the bridal party entered the parlor and took their places beneath an arch of evergreens and white carnations. The bride was becomingly attired in navy blue with net trimmings. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Edith Lloyd, who also wore navy blue. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Alex. Hunter.

After congratulations about thirty guests repaired to the dining-hall, where a splendid supper was well served and much enjoyed by all, after which the evening was spent in music and other various amusements.

Next morning the happy couple motored to the depot and left, mid showers of rice, for their new home at Gooderham. We wish them a long and happy wedded life.

Detlor

(Received too late for last week)

Ho! Ho! The winds do blow. This looks like the great equinoctial storm. It has been most inclement weather since Friday night last, a driving rain, at times sleety and almost hail, with quite a heavy thunder-storm on Sunday night last, which lasted in all over an hour. At midnight it turned cold, and Monday was a fair winter's day, except that the snow did not cover the grass entirely.

Some few of the hunters are having fairly good success this season, while others are reported as having no success at all.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Miller and little son, of Cartier, accompanied by Mr. Miller's sister, Mrs. F. John's of Cartier vicinity, arrived on Tuesday, October 28th, to spend a couple of weeks visiting Mr. Miller's father and Mrs. Miller's sister and other friends and relatives in this and other neighboring localities.

Mr. Will Turncliffe is making preparations for the building of a fine new barn next spring. His father and brother have the stone foundation well on the way to completion, and expect to have it thoroughly completed this fall.

Some few of the people are suffering from quite severe colds.

Mr. Will Smith has moved his family and household effects to Mrs. J. Miller's farm, the place J. Sutton farm.

Mrs. J. King has disposed of her property known as the Cliff House at Detlor, near L'Amable station, for a comfortable little dot to Mr. Will Tice. Mr. Tice took possession on Nov. 1st. To the new proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. Tice, we extend best wishes for their success in their new enterprise in business, and trust the patronizing public will always find a kind and genial host and hostess, who in return will reap the goodwill in general. Mrs. King. Miss King and Mr. Austin King, who will all be missed in their different social manner, will remain for a short time, afterwards going to Florida, where, we understand, they own quite a good deal of property in the fast growing city of McCloud, Florida, where we hope they will meet with many kind friends.

Mr. W. H. Bradshaw has returned from Saskatchewan, far West, where he spent the past couple of months.

Never avoid your share in any unpleasant duty to be performed.

When washing colored or patterned materials in which the colors may run, one teaspoonful of blue-black ink added to the tub of water will set the colors once and for all.

Storm's Havoc in Northern Woods

Woodsmen and hunters now coming out of the timber country in and adjacent to the Mississauga forest reserve report that a vast amount of damage had been caused by the recent great storm to the standing timber. While there is a difference of opinion as to the extent of the damage done, all who have been in the back townships admit that it is tremendous. One man estimates the amount of fallen timber at not less than forty per cent.

Not only will the loss from fallen timber be great, but it greatly increases the danger from fire during the next season and for summers to come unless steps are taken to prevent it. Lumbermen in the limits bordering on the reserve will have much extra work in clearing roads, which have been badly obstructed. One lumberman reports that seventy per cent. of his particular limit is now down. The Ontario Government will do well by taking immediate steps to investigate the extent of damage and decide what should be done to eliminate as far as possible the fire risk.

Cooper

The weather is gradually growing colder. Skating will soon be the order of the day.

The Orangemen of L.O.L. No. 253 intend holding their annual oyster supper on December 12th. The young people are busily practicing the program.

A number of young people from Madoc spent a very enjoyable evening at Mr. D. W. Bird's. Among those present were Misses A. Hannah, M. Campbell and Mr. S. Rollins from Cooper.

A number from here attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Blakely, of Hazzard's Corners, on Sunday afternoon.

The shareholders of the Oak Leaf factory held their meeting on Saturday last.

Mrs. D. S. Bird fell and hurt her shoulder quite badly last week but is slowly recovering.

Mrs. A. Graham spent part of last week the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. Hagerman, of Queensboro.

Mr. Wm. West, who is our rural mail drawer, very nearly had a serious accident. One night last week a pig, scared by two dogs, ran under his rig, causing the horse to take fright. The only damage done was that the shafts were broken. We hope he will not meet with many such accidents in the future.

Huge Consumption of Spruce for Pulp

The abundance and cheapness of newspapers and other printed matter is one of the most salient features of our modern life. We take a complacent pride in comparing our one-cent 12-page productions with the insignificant six-penny "Times" of a hundred years ago. We seldom give it a thought that all this wealth of morning and evening editions, sporting extras, magazine sections and comic supplements, is making a tremendous drain on our forests of spruce.

One large daily paper in New York consumes in the course of a year as much spruce as can be cut from four to five thousand acres. If the proprietors of this newspaper maintained a forest, sufficiently large for the annual growth to supply them with all the pulp necessary for a year's consumption of paper, they would require a tract about 14 miles square.

The demand for spruce is not only large but rapidly increasing. In the United States the cut of 1909 was double that of 1899 and six times that of 1889. It is not surprising, therefore, to learn that Mr. Pinchot has estimated that there is only from 10 to 30 years' cut in sight in the various states. Already the production of pulpwood south of the border seems to have reached a maximum, having decreased from 1,786,000 cords in 1906 to 1,474,000 cords in 1910. This decreasing supply, operating in conjunction with the increasing demand, has led to a great augmentation in the imports from Canada.

At the present time, pulp-wood is made almost entirely from spruce and principally by the mechanical process. In Canada in 1912 the aggregate of wood used was 866,042 cords, and of this 677,747 cords were spruce. The aggregate of pulp manufactured was 682,632 tons, of which amount 499,226 tons were made mechanically. These figures represent an increase of about 44 per cent. over 1910. Canada has by no means yet reached the limit of her production, but it can only be a question of time till operations of the same forces bring about the same situation as in the United States.

In the circumstances the question of finding substitutes for spruce becomes of peculiar interest and it is interesting to learn that, assisted by a grant of $30,000 from Congress, experiments are now being carried on in Wisconsin with a view to testing the efficacy of such woods as hemlock and jackpine as substitutes for spruce in the manufacture of paper-pulp. With regard to jackpine it may be said that if it could be utilized in the making of paper, we might turn to profitable account a tree which, at present, has very little commercial value.

Potato Prices Will Go Higher

There is every possibility of a potato famine in the very near future, and losses will be suffered by both farmers and dealers alike by the shortage. Not only is the crop of this province affected, but in most of the New England States.

A prolonged rainfall, followed by heavy frosts, delayed the harvesting of the crop.

Whole fields of the crop will be lost in this manner, especially in Maine.

The potatoes which have already come in are of a poor quality and dealers would not buy them to stock for the winter but preferred to wait.

Unless very high prices are paid later in the season it it not be possible to ship any from the more Southern States, as the demand there is so great that they cannot be spared unless a high price is paid.

Fall Ploughing

Experience each year demonstrates to the observant farmer the wisdom of ploughing his land in the fall for certain crops.

It subjects the soil to the pulverizing effects of the frost.

It helps the two layers of earth to settle well together.

It conserves more moisture than spring-ploughed land, and thus bears better the dry weather in the growing season.

It helps greatly to destroy the larvae of the wire worm, cut worm and the red-headed white grub.

It relieves the press and hurry of the spring work, and enables him to work the land much earlier the spring following.

A Scratching Post for Hogs

If a hog knew how to tell his wants he would demand a scratching post for himself. A successful Maryland hog-grower adopts this plan. Firmly plant a hickery or oak post four inches in diameter in the hog run. Coil a rope around the post as high as a hog stands and staple it on securely. Then thoroughly saturate the rope with crude petroleum and it becomes an ideal cratching post for hogs and pigs. They will rub against it continually and oil is fatal to vermin. Kerosene can be used, but it evaporates too readily.

Her Great Love;

Or, A Struggle For a Heart

CHAPTER XXVII.

"It is worth living for!" she repeated, with a choking laugh. "To think of it!" She snatched up a book from the small table near her, and dashed her hand on the inner cover, which bore his book-plate with its coat of arms above his name and title. "To think that I knew you were the owner here, that I've seen your name in all these books, and never knew, never guessed—"

She paused, breathless with excitement and triumph. Her voice, usually so musical, was thick and vulgar, the vulgarity of a common nature bursting through the thin coating of veneer, and she was at that moment, for all her beauty and grace, a virago of the worst type as she confronted him.

Gaunt stood quite still, his eyes fixed on her with the calmness of despair, the impassivity of disgust.

"Why did you leave me?" she demanded, stridently. "Why did you do it?"

"Can you ask?" he said, very quietly. "Do you think it was possible for me to remain with you when I discovered—what you were, what and who it was I had married?"

The reply infuriated her. She took a step toward him, and stared into his face with the passion of hate burning in her black eyes.

"You deserted me!"

"I left you, yes," he said, as calmly as before; "but deserted—in the strict, legal sense—no. I provided for you—"

"A beggarly allowance. You married me in a false name!"

"No," he said again, with a touch of weariness in his voice. "Edward Barnard are two of my names. I concealed my family name and title; yes, that is true. I must have had some presentiment—of what you were."

She flung her arms out.

"The law will reach you, punish you!" she hissed.

He made a slight gesture of indifference.

"You cannot get rid of me!" she exclaimed, with an air of triumph. "You can not divorce me! You would if you could!"

"No," he said in exactly the same tone. It was as if he were confronting the passion with the calmness of despair, the indifference of the rock to the howling wave which beat against it in vain. "Do what you will, I should not seek for a divorce. I am content to suffer anything rather than bring shame and disgrace upon the name I bear."

"You can bring no charge against me!" she said, defiantly.

He made a gesture of assent.

"I am glad," he said, with a sigh. "I left you because I discovered what you were before I married you. Be silent a moment!" for she had opened her lips as if about to protest, retort. "Put yourself in my place. I loved you, deeming you all that a girl should be, all that a woman should be who takes the name of an honest man. I found— Ah, why should I tell you? You know."

She flung herself into a chair, and leaning her face on her hand, looked up at him with a mixture of defiance and hatred.

"What else could I do but leave you?" he said. "What other course was open to a man of honor when he had discovered the—the—I had married—an adventuress of the worst, the vilest type? God knows, I loved you—"

She laughed discordantly.

"Not you," she retorted.

"Yes," he said, as calmly as before; "I loved you. Why else should I have married you? I should have loved you to the end, while life lasted; if I had not learned what you had been. Even then I would have fought that terrible knowledge and—and remained with you, if I had not learned also that you were without a heart, that you had married me for a place in the world—for money."

He paused and looked gravely at her. All the while he had been talking to her, looking at her, he had been thinking of Decima; had been contrasting this woman, his wife, the adventuress with her vile past, contrasting her with the pure-minded girl who had just left him. It was as if an angel of light had flown from his side and a fiend in woman's shape had taken her place. His heart felt numbed with the misery of despair, with the utter hopelessness of the situation.

It was as if he had been suddenly awakened from an exquisite dream of bliss to find that his hours were numbered; or, worse still, that the rest of his days were to be spent in a darkness and anguish beyond words to describe.

His hand touched the key of the door behind him, and, half mechanically, he locked it and moved to the fire-place and looked at her again.

"I am sorry that you have compelled me to say all this," he said, with a courtesy more galling than any vituperation, any reproach, would have been. "Will you tell me what, having found me, you intend to do? I suppose you and your brother have made some plans."

She raised her eyes suddenly.

"Did Morgan know who you were, that you lived here?" she demanded.

Gaunt looked faintly surprised.

"Yes," he said, quietly. "Was it not he who betrayed me? It would be like him, worthy of him. I did not bribe him heavily enough, I suppose."

"You—you bribed him? Then he knew all the time, and kept it from me. Kept it from me all the while he was pretending to look for you."

"Yes," said Gaunt, indifferently; for what did it matter now? "I bribed him, as you put it. I paid him to keep the secret of my identity. He discovered it."

She sprung to her feet.

"You are a pretty pair!" she exclaimed, with a hard laugh. "So he has been taking money to—to help rob me of my rights! Oh, I'll be even with him!"

"I have no doubt you will," said Gaunt, wearily. "But may I ask you to answer my question. What do you intend to do?"

"What am I going to do?" she said, mockingly, tauntingly. "Can you ask? I am going to have my rights! I am going to live with you!"

He made a slight gesture of dissent.

"You can not do that," he said, gravely. "I could not live with you."

"You can't help it!" she said, jeeringly. "The law is on my side, and it shall help me. I'll go to law. I will go to a solicitor directly I leave here. He shall claim my right to have your name—my proper name—Lady Gaunt."

"I can not withhold that from you," he said, with perfect calm.

"No; and I mean to hold you, too," she said, defiantly, gloatingly. "Where a husband is, there a wife has a right to be. You can't cast me off, and you shall not! I'll have my title, and—and half your money!"

"Ah, yes," he said, almost to himself.

"Yes; and I'll go into the world, the society my rank is entitled to, and I'll go as your wife, by your side. You shall take me and introduce me to all your relations and friends."

He smiled bitterly, coolly; and the smile seemed to madden her.

"You refuse?" she said.

"I refuse, yes," he said, grimly. "You may have all else you demand. The title, the money—far more than half of that which belongs to me, but no more. I could not face the world by your side."

She laughed stridently.

"Could you not? We will see! The law will help me. I will avail myself of it. I will enter an action—compel you, yes, compel you to acknowledge me and live with me."

"You can not," he said, as if he were stating a simple fact. "I leave England in a few hours; I shall be beyond the reach of even your malice."

She sprung from the chair, upsetting it in her violence, and it fell against the small table, overturning it.

It came to the ground with a crash, and the bric-a-brac was strewn upon the floor.

As she rose to her feet she uttered a cry, a cry like that of a wild beast balked of its revenge.

Gaunt looked at the overturned table and curios indifferently. A knock came at the door.

"Did you call, sir?" asked the maid outside.

"No," said Gaunt; and she went away.

"Take care!" said Laura, hoarsely, as she pushed the hair from her forehead. "You don't know what I can do! You talk of your name—the disgrace and shame! I can drag it in the dust for you—and I will, too! I'll tell the whole story! I'll fill the papers with 'Lord and Lady Gaunt's Case.' I'll make you a laughing-stock throughout England."

"Yes," he said, with terrible calmness, "you can do that; and I have no doubt you will. But you can not compel me to live with you. And the world will understand why I do not."

Her face went white, and she ground her teeth.

"What do I care?" she said. "I shall have had my revenge. You won't be able to show your face in England again; and I—I shall live here, shall be Lady Gaunt, your wife, your ill-used wife!"

He smiled.

"Yes," he said. "Let that thought console you; let it content you. I shall say no word, utter no denial."

The calmness of his acquiescence startled her. She went closer to him, and looked at him keenly.

"You are going away—out of England. Are you going alone, I wonder?"

For the first time his calmness broke down. It was as if she had found the chink in his armor through which she could thrust an envenomed dagger.

She saw the change in his expression, and uttered a cry.

"Ah, you are not! There is some woman!" She laughed discordantly. "Don't deny it! I can see it in your face! So that's it! I can understand now!"

She stood before him, her face flushed, her eyes glittering.

"What a fool I was not to have hit upon it before! There's another woman!"

He had regained his old calmness, and met her furious, taunting gaze with impassive sternness. No man could be more impassive, more stone-like than Gaunt when he chose.

"You don't deny it!" she went on, scanning his face. "Ah, I know that look! There is some one else!"

She came and stood beside him, so close that the perfume he hated seemed to suffocate him. He caught his breath, but said never a word, and his silence increased her fury.

"You to talk of shame and disgrace!" she said. "You hypocrite! You—you liar! Shame and disgrace, indeed! Yes, you shall have them, and not you alone, but she, whoever she is! I'll find it all out! I'll have the best detectives money—your money—can buy, and I'll drag her through the divorce court!"

He did not move a muscle, but stood regarding her with perfect calm.

"Who is she?" she demanded. "You may as well tell me. One of your great lady friends—a woman of rank, or some common girl!" She paused for breath and looked round the room.

As evil chance would have it, her eye fell upon Decima's veil. It had become unfastened from the side of her hat as Decima had entered, and she had taken it off and laid it on the top of a cabinet.

Laura sprung to it, and seizing it, held it out to him.

"Whose is this?" she demanded, hoarsely. "Why, she's here now—this moment—in your rooms!"

She sprung to the door of the inner room and tore at the handle. Then, when she found it was locked, she turned upon him.

"She's here—in that room. Unlock that door! Unlock it! I'm your wife, and I order you—" Her voice broke and failed chokingly. Gaunt watched her—or say, rather, that his eyes were fixed on the veil. Remember how he loved Decima, how devotedly he worshipped her innocence and purity. He pictured this fury dragging out the girl he loved and covering her with vituperation and abuse. Rather this, and bear with him, for he needs all your charity and clemency.

He sprung forward, and seizing her by the arm, flung her on to the couch.

"Silence!" he said, as he tore the veil from her fingers. "Silence! You—desecrate—" He thrust the veil in his breast, and stood over her, panting and struggling for the mastery of his passion. "Do what you will," he said at last, when he had regained something like calm. "Do all you have threatened; but—but go now; leave me! It is not safe!"

His voice rose at the last words; they could have been heard plainly by any one who happened to be in the corridor.

She leaned back, rubbing the arm he had gripped.

"Go! go!" she retorted, defiantly, tauntingly. "No, I will not go! Why should I? This is your house, and I am your wife! My place is here! I shall not go! And you can't compel me! I am your wife—your wife! It's that other woman who is hiding here, the other—"

She uttered a word that can not be written, and as it struck his ears, Gaunt raised his hand as if to silence her mocking, taunting lips. Then the hand fell to his side, and he said, hoarsely:

"If you will not go, I will! Stay where you are! Do not attempt to follow me! I—I can not answer for myself!"

He strode to the door and unlocked it, and looked at her for a moment.

"Go!" she cried, with a strident laugh; "go to her, I say! This place is mine—mine! I am your wife! As for her—Shame and disgrace. You shall have enough of it—both of you—and to spare. I'll—"

Gaunt took up his hat, passed into the inner room, looking the door as he did so. He looked round wildly. The room was empty. Decima was not there.

His brain was in a whirl; he scarcely knew where he was, what he was doing. All his thoughts were of Decima—to get her out of the place, out of reach of the demon he had just left.

He looked round the room again. Her hat and jacket were not there. He went hurriedly into the next room—a bath and dressing-room. She was not there, nor was there any trace of her. The room adjoining was a kind of "den" in which he kept his guns and fishing-tackle—a bachelor's litter-room. She was not there. He looked round, and drew a breath of relief. She must have gone. It was just possible that she had not heard a word of what had passed between them and—his wife.

He stood for a moment, and wiped the sweat from his forehead. He had been calm enough until the last moment or two; but now his heart was beating furiously, and he was all of a shake. But it was because he was thinking of Decima.

He saw now how mad—how bad—he had been. He had tempted her, persuaded her to fly with him; he had tempted her to her ruin. In a moment, overwhelmed by his passionate love, he had lured her to ruin. And she would have come to his lure. He saw now, as by a flash of lightning, how bad, how cruel, he had been.

Thank goodness she had escaped! He had lost her forever—should never see her again; but—no matter, she was saved. As for him, what did it matter what became of him?

He sunk into a chair, his head bowed in his hands. A terrible blow had fallen upon him; but the hand of Providence, which had dealt it, had, at the same time, been stretched out to save her—his dear, sweet girl-love!

She had gone. She was safe at Lady Pauline's house in Berkeley Square—safe from him and his fatal love.

He was glad, and yet—and yet the thought that she was lost to him, that he should never hold her in his arms again, never, perhaps, see her again, filled him with anguish. He could have borne it all if he had not known that she loved him. But he knew that she loved him. To hear her sweet confession of love ringing in his ears, to feel her kisses upon his lips! He was almost mad with longing and with remorse.

He rose presently. It had seemed hours while he was sitting there; in reality it had only been minutes. He rose and looked round with the numbed feeling of a man waking from chloroform.

From this room a door led directly on to the corridor. It was always kept locked, but the key was in its place. He went to turn it, but found the door unlocked. Then he understood. Decima had escaped—yes, that was the word, escaped—this way.

He drew the key sharply from the lock. It had been in its place so long that it stuck, and as he jerked it violently, it cut his finger. He did not feel the cut, did not know that his finger was bleeding, until he saw a spot of blood on the wristband of his shirt.

With an impatient gesture he put the key in his pocket, wiped his finger on his handkerchief, and passed into the corridor, locking the door behind him, and slipping the key in his pocket.

As he went down the corridor he heard voices, and he saw the parlor-maid leaning beside the lift talking to the porter within it.

She started guiltily at sight of him, and the man touched his hat as the maid fled hastily.

Gaunt returned the salutation and went quickly down the stairs.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The infuriated woman tore at the handle of the door for a moment, then she stopped. There had been something in Gaunt's face, in his eyes, which, if it did not exactly frighten her, warned her that it would not be safe to follow him.

She left the door, and paced up and down the room for a moment or two.

"Yes, I'll wait. I'll stay here. It's my proper place. I'm his wife. He'll find me here when he comes back—if he does come back; if he doesn't, I'll stay here. I'll drag his name in the dirt; I'll—"

She sunk on to the couch, and rocked herself to and fro. She was choking with passion. But presently the violence of the fit passed and she rose and went to a mirror and looked at her face. She was burning hot, the perspiration had played havoc with her "make-up," and the powder and colors showed in streaks upon her face. She wiped it with her lace handkerchief and smoothed her hair; then she looked round the room searchingly, went to the sideboard, and wrenching the door open, found what she was looking for. She poured out a glass of brandy and drank some of it eagerly, greedily; then she drew a long breath, and seating herself by the fire, bent forward, her chin resting in one hand, the glass held in the other.

Out of the Frying Pan.

"When she married, ten years ago, she stated frankly that it was simply to avoid working for a living."

"What does she do all the time?"

"Takes care of seven small children."

Explaining His Taste.

"Binglewood has put that wild boy of his on a farm and the youngster writes home that he likes it."

"Likes it! Well, farming ain't what it used to be."

It requires a tactful man to remember a woman's birthday and yet forget her age.

Put to the Test.

Little Willie's father found his youthful son holding up one of his rabbits by the ears, and saying to him, "How much is seven and seven, now?" "Bah!" the father heard the boy say, "I knew you couldn't. Here's another one—six and six is how much?" "Why, Willie, what in the world are you doing with your rabbit?" asked the father. Willie threw the rabbit down with disgust. "I knew our teacher was lying to us," was all he said. "Why, how?" asked the father. "Why, she told us this morning that rabbits were the greatest multipliers in the world, and this dummy can't even speak."

The Neighborly Spirit.

The neighborly spirit is an excellent thing to cultivate, although not, perhaps, as it is cultivated in the following story:

"How do you like your new home?" a friend asked a man who had recently moved into the village.

"Pretty well."

"Have you called on your neighbors yet?"

"No," the newcomer admitted, "I haven't. But I'm going to if any more of my wood is missing."

WILL IRRIGATE THE SAHARA.

Will Open Well With Flow of 8,000 Gallons Per Minute.

The Sahara, according to common opinion, is a land entirely without water. This is far from the truth; in all parts of the region that are inhabited there is plenty of water. The only trouble is to find it, as it lies at an unknown depth below the surface.

To discover and make available this hidden water supply is the mission of a corps of artesian well diggers which is operating in the south of Algeria.

In February one of these engineers opened a well for which is claimed the world's record, having a flow of 8,000 gallons a minute. This is in the oasis of Tolga, about 22 miles west of Biskra.

The water of this well rises into a fountain nearly six feet high and forms a small river which will make it possible to cultivate nearly 8,000 acres. The former record for Algeria was 3,400 gallons a minute from a well bored in 1907 in the oasis of Touggourt.

In the last 10 years this artesian corps has bored wells producing 46,000 gallons a minute, making 116,000 since the French occupation began. This permits the irrigation of 1,800,000 date palms, in which lies the wealth of Southern Algeria.

ANXIOUS TIMES FOR PARENTS

Children Often Seem Pining Away And Ordinary Medicine Does Not Help Them

The health of children between the ages of twelve and eighteen years, particularly in the case of girls, is a source of serious worry to nearly every mother. The growth and development takes so much of their strength that in many cases they actually seem to be going into a decline. The appetite is fickle, brightness gives way to depression; there are often serious headaches, fits of dizziness, or occasional fainting and a complaint of weariness at the slightest exertion. Ordinary medicines will not bring relief. The blood has become thin and watery, and the child must have something that will bring the blood back to its normal condition. At this stage no other medicine can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Their whole mission is to make new blood, which reaches every part of the body, bringing back health, strength and energy. Mrs. James Harris, Port Rowan, Ont., says: "At the age of thirteen my daughter began to look very pale, and seemed listless and always tired. She did not take interest in her school work or in those amusements of girlhood. In fact she just seemed to drag herself about, complaining of always being tired; did not eat well, and did not sleep well at night. I took her to our doctor who said she was anaemic, and advised me to give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She took the Pills for nearly two months, when she was as well and lively as any girl could be, gained nicely in weight, and has since enjoyed perfect health. I am quite sure that what the Pills did for my daughter they will do for other pale, weak girls. I have also used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills myself with the best results and can only speak of them in terms of greatest praise."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Egyptians Divided Day.

The early Egyptians divided day and night each into twelve hours, a custom adopted by the Jews or Greeks probably from the Babylonians. The day is said to have been divided into hours from 293 B.C., when L. Papirus Cursor erected a sundial in the temple of Quicinus at Rome. Before water clocks were invented in 158 B.C., time was called at Rome by public criers. In England the measurement of time was, in early days, uncertain; one expedient was by wax candles, three inches burning an hour and six wax candles burning twenty-four hours—ascribed to Alfred, 886.

Suspense.

He—Darling, why are you so sad?

She (gulping down a sob)—Oh, dearest, I was just thinking this will be our last evening together until to-morrow night!

Not in Her Line.

Mamma—When that naughty little boy threw stones at you why didn't you come to me instead of throwing them back?

Johnny (aged six)—Huh! What was the use? You couldn't hit the side of a barn.

Sergeant-Major Under General French

Veteran of Boer War Who Lost Health on the Veldt Tells Experience.

Good Advice for All Who Have Indigestion or Stomach Disorders.

In his home at Waldegrove, N.S., no one is better known than Sergt.-Major Cross, late of the 4th Queen's Own Hussars. Speaking of the ill-effects of a campaign upon a man's constitution, the Sergt.-Major writes: "I served under General French during the late Boer war, in the capacity of Sergt.-Major. It was perhaps owing to a continued diet of bully beef, hard tack, and bad water, but at any rate my stomach entirely gave out. I was in such a state that I could eat nothing without the greatest suffering. The army doctors did not help me much, and since leaving the service I have been very miserable. Some few months ago a friend told me he had been a great sufferer from indigestion until he tried Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they cured him. I confess it was without much faith I bought a box, but the first dose made me feel better than I had been for a long time. Dr. Hamilton's Pills completely cured, and now I can eat everything and anything. I have recommended them to others and in every case the result has been similar to mine."

Quick, sure results attend the use of Dr. Hamilton's pills. They cure disorders of the stomach, correct indigestion, make you feel uplifted and strengthened. To renew or maintain health, Dr. Hamilton's Pills always prove a good prescription. 25c. per box, five boxes for $1.00, all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

UNIQUE POW-WOW.

Manitoba Indians Pass Resolution To Guard Against Fire.

Probably nowhere else in Canada is there a stronger co-operative spirit in forest fire protection than has been developed by the Chief Fire Ranger of the Dominion Government among the rangers, Indians, trappers and packers of the Northern Manitoba Fire District, says a Forestry branch press bulletin. The work among the Indians has been especially beneficial; for in the past they were notoriously careless, especially in leaving camp-fires burning. But, largely owing to the energy and initiative of the Chief Ranger, the attitude of the Indians has been changed from one of indifference to one of keen interest, so much so, that that official writes: "The conservation of the forests has become as red-hot a topic out here as real estate in the West."

Recently, when treaty-money was being paid to the Indians at Cross Lake, a special council meeting of seventy-five to eighty Indians was called, at which an animated discussion of forest fire protection took place. The Chief Ranger writes: "While the meeting was in progress, the Indian Agent and party came, but to the surprise of many the meeting held no interest till, by a standing vote, all asserted their willingness to help in the protection of the forests from fire. The chief and councillors wished me to convey to the Director of Forestry at Ottawa this, their resolution."

Whenever possible such councils are attended by the Chief Ranger, and all Indians promising to co-operate with the Dominion rangers are presented with a metal badge of office. The most intelligent of the Indians are engaged as regular fire-rangers by the Dominion Government and do very conscientious work. Although the patrol is difficult, being done wholly by canoe, and the weather is often inclement, the eighteen fire-rangers in this district average about eighteen miles a day, including Sundays, throughout the ummer.

During the whole season, no serious damage was done by fire although many incipient forest fires were extinguished, a fact that speaks well for the efficiency of the patrol and the value of the co-operative spirit inculcated in the Indians.

GUARD THE BABY AGAINST COLDS

The season for colds is at hand and unless the mother keeps a continual watch over her little ones cold will seize them and often more serious results follow. An occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets will prevent colds, or if they do come on suddenly the Tablets will clear the stomach and bowels and instantly relieve the baby from cold. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HOW TO BE A CENTENARIAN.

Many Recipes on How to Live a Hundred Years.

If you want to know how to live to be a hundred there are plenty of people who have done it to give you advice. The worst of it is that every centenarian will give you a different recipe. One will tell you that he never smoked and never touched alcohol, and another will ascribe his many years to the fact that since he was a boy he smoked five ounces of tobacco a week and drank four pints of beer a day. One old fellow will declare that he has exceeded the allotted span simply because he ate an apple every day before breakfast and had a cold bath every morning, another will put it down to a boiling hot bath every night and a cup of strong tea before going to bed, while a dear old dodderer of 112 or so will openly boast that he never had a bath in his life, and insists that the secret is "salt and plenty of it." A Mrs. Rebecca Law, of Chesterfield, Essex, England, who celebrated her hundredth birthday recently, gives yet another recipe, and it is probably as good as any other, though it may not appeal to every one. When asked the usual question her reply was, "Hard work, my dear, and happy with it." Which is a veritable sermon in little.

Jealousy will not listen to reason, because it doesn't believe there is such a thing.

Sore Chest Cured in One Night

Broke Up a Heavy Cold, Relieved Pain in the Side, Stopped an Irritating Cough.

"Anyone that goes through all that I suffered last winter will appreciate the value of a remedy that cures like Nerviline cured me." These are the opening words of the solemn declaration of E. P. Von Hayden, the well-known violinist. "My work kept me out late at night, and playing in cold, drafty places brought on a severe cold that settled on my chest. I had a harsh, racking cough and severe pains darted through my sides and settled in my shoulders. I used different liniments, but none broke up my cold till I used Nerviline. I rubbed it on my neck, chest, and shoulders, morning and night, and all the pain disappeared. Realizing that such a heavy cold had run down my system, I took Ferrozone at meals, and was completely built up and strengthened. Since using Nerviline I have no more colds or pleurisy, and enjoy perfect health."

NERVILINE CURES CHEST COLDS

It's because Nerviline contains the purest and most healing medicinal principles, because it has the power of sinking through the pores to the kernel of the pain—these are the reasons why it breaks up colds, cures lumbago, stiffness, neuralgia, sciatica, and rheumatism. Refuse any substitute your dealer may suggest—insist on Nerviline only. Large family size bottles, 50c.; trial size, 25c.; all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

Don't Be Sad.

Upon the sadness of the sea
The sunset broods regretfully;
From the far, lonely spaces slow
Withdraws the wistful afterglow.

So out of life the splendor dies,
So darken all the happy skies;
So gathers twilight, cold and stern,
But overhead the planets burn.

And up the east another day
Shall chase the bitter dark away;
What though our eyes with tears be wet!
The sunrise never failed us yet.

The blush of dawn may yet restore
Our light and hope and joy once more;
Sad soul, take comfort, nor forget
That sunrise never failed us yet!

HEAD GOT BALD IN PLACES

Very Itchy. When Brushed, Dandruff All Over. Hair Came Out in Great Bunches. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment Cured Head in Three Weeks.

15 Hallam St., Toronto, Ont.—"About two years ago the dandruff began. My head got worse and scabs formed on it which made it bald in places. It was very itchy and gave me a tendency to scratch it which made it worse. I always had to wear my hat whether in the house at work or out. Whenever I brushed my hair it sent the dandruff all over. The hair came out in great bunches until I was nearly bald and when it was at its worst it came out roots and all.

"I tried——which made it worse than before. I tried several things after that but they were no good. After nine months like this I had hardly any hair left when one day I happened to see the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment in the paper. I straightway sent for a sample. After first washing with the Cuticura Soap I applied some Cuticura Ointment and I could feel a great relief. After finishing the sample I went and got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. In three weeks they had cured my head." (Signed) B. Horn, May 16, 1913.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment do so much for poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, and cost so little, that it is almost criminal not to use them. A single set is often sufficient. Sold everywhere. For liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

Hermit In London.

There was a hermit in the centre of London only a few years ago, according to the London Chronicle. His hermitage consisted of a cellar—the sole vestige of a house in Clare Street pulled down and forgotten by its owners. He lived there for a long time, supported by scraps of food from the tradesmen of the neighborhood, and might have lived there longer still if a journalist had not "discovered" him. He was interviewed and photographed to death, for the workhouse authorities, nearly next door, who had hitherto turned a blind eye toward him, were compelled to oust him from his hermitage and make him clean and respectable—a process to which he succumbed.

Bad Situation.

"I don't know how we'll face our neighbors when they return."

"What has happened?"

"We were taking care of their cat and their parrot. Yesterday the cat ate the parrot and then died of indigestion."

New Treatment Now Advocated For Bronchitis

Is Having Wonderful Success, and is Making Most Remarkable Cures.

For bronchitis a different form of treatment is now advocated. It consists of a scientifically devised vapor that penetrates to the uttermost recesses of the lungs and bronchial tubes. Every spot that is sore, every surface that is irritated is at once bathed with soothing balsams and healing essences that make chronic bronchitis an impossibility.

This treatment now so universally employed in bronchitis, throat troubles, colds, etc., is called CATARRHOZONE. It acts just as air of the pine woods acts, as a healing antiseptic remedy for all diseases of the breathing organs.

Just think of it—a remedy that can be carried with the very air you breathe to the seat of bronchial or catarrhal inflammation. A remedy powerful enough to kill germ life and yet so healing that disease flees before it. Catarrhozone is truly a wonderful remedy. In many lands it has won its way, and is affording grand results to sufferers from colds, catarrh, throat weakness, asthma and bronchitis. There is no sufferer from a grippy cold or any winter ill, that won't find a cure in Catarrhozone, which is employed by physicians, ministers, lawyers and public men throughout many foreign lands. Large size lasts two months and costs $1.00 and is guaranteed; small size 50c., sample size 25c., all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Unfailing Remedy.

Mrs. Newed (to dear friend)—"What's the secret of getting a new frock out of hubby after he refuses once?"

Mrs. Wiley—"If at first you don't succeed, cry again."

"Joseph," said the merchant to the bright young man with the best references, "the bookkeeper tells me that you have lost the key of the safe, and he cannot get at the books." "Yes, sir, one of them. You gave me two, you remember?" "Yes, I had duplicates made, in case of accident. And the other?" "Oh, sir, I took care of that. I was afraid I might lose one of them, you know." "And is the other all right?" "Yes, sir. I put it where there was no danger of it being lost. It is in the safe, sir."

Grains of Gold.

There never has been a cause which was not injured by the indiscretions of some of its supporters.—Mrs. Snowden.

Let us always bear in mind that heroes and heroism are visible, and produced not in the splendor of triumph, but in the anguish of adversity.—Lord Rosebery.

Money is the last enemy that shall never be subdued. While there is flesh there is money—or the want of money; but money is always on the brain so long as there is a brain in reasonable order.—Samuel Butler.

There's not a blessed thing in this world worth having without sacrifice. The big people, the people that have the big things in life, are those that have paid or are prepared to pay the big price for them.—W. J. Locke.

A man should dare to live his small span of life with little heed of the common speech upon him or his life, only caring that his days may be full of reality, and his conversation of truthspeaking and wholeness.—John Morley.

All He Wants.

"I don't want to be very rich."

"That so?"

"No. I have no desire to have a great fortune."

"Then what do you want?"

"I'd be perfectly happy if I were rich enough to give my wife an allowance every week, instead of having to take my pay envelope intact and receiving an allowance from my wife."

SHORTER DAYS IN LONG AGO.

Contained Only Ten Hours 56,000,000 Years Back.

In a lecture at the Royal Academy in London recently on the movement of the stars, Professor H. H. Turner stated that 46,000,000 years ago there were but sixteen hours to a day and twenty-nine days to a month.

Some 10,000,000 years before that the day was ten hours long, and going back still further into the recesses of time, it was reduced to one hour. That, explained Prof. Turner, according to The London Chronicle, was when the earth and moon were close together—when they had recently parted company, in fact, and had started on their career as separate bodies.

The principle, said Prof. Turner, applied to a very large class of bodies in the sidereal system—the double stars. Astronomers knew two stars in the sky so close together that it never had been possible to separate one from another, even through the best telescopes, though it was known that one of them was very considerably brighter than the other, and it was supposed that one was describing an orbit around the other.

At the other end of the scale there were some stars that had not completed their orbit in the century since they were described by Herschell. Some of them might occupy 200 or 300 years, and there were even instances in which the orbit would occupy thousands of years.

The cause of the changes in the length of our day, said Professor Turner, was the effect of the tides on the earth's rotation. The moon raised two tides—one side because she pulled away the water from the earth, on the other because she pulled away the earth from the water.

"I," she said, "can trace ancestry back to armor and shirts of mail." "I started to trace my ancestry back once," he replied, "but my wife made me stop when I got to the shirt sleeves and overalls."

High School Literary

On Monday evening the High School Literary Society held another of their interesting and instructive programs. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. The President announced that on Friday evening, December 12th, an inter High School debating contest would take place between Stirling and Madoc schools, such debate to be held in the Masonic Hall here. Misses Kathleen Nickle and Tillie Forrestall favored the audience with a piano duet. Miss Clara Thompson gave a very interesting paper on "Current Events," giving an account of the recent disastrous storm on the great lakes and briefly reviewed the British labor troubles, the attacks made in Europe on Canada and other important events of the past two weeks. Miss Estella Baker gave a humorous reading describing the silver wedding of a wash-woman. A chorus by the Form I girls followed. An interesting paper on "Mexico" was given by Miss Luella Harrison, who began with the early history of that turbulent republic and sketching the events till the present. Miss Thompson gave another very interesting "Picture Talk" taking as her subject "The Gleaners" by a French peasant artist. Bruce McBain read a very amusing account of the misfortunes of the Bradley family. Mr. Douglas Mounteer spoke on the subject of a "University Education." He showed that it was to the advantage of and comparatively easy for any ambitious youth to get such an education and, dealing with the cost of a college course, he showed how easily any student could obtain money for the course and be able to repay it three or four years after his graduation. Bruce McBain then presented Mr. Mounteer with a beautiful leather bound copy of Tennyson's poems, his prize as winner of the oratorial contest held a few weeks ago. Mr. Moffat, who had been appointed critic, took the opportunity to thank the citizens of Madoc for their attendance and asked them to make any suggestions they might wish in connection with the programs. His criticism showed considerable satisfaction in the advances made by the pupils in their literary efforts and he asked them to earnestly consider Mr. Mounteer's address and to become more ambitious for a higher education. The singing of the National Anthem closed the meeting.

Falling Hair

Many People have a Simple Way of Stopping It—They Use Parisian Sage

It was Dr. Sangerbond, of Paris, who first discovered that dandruff and falling hair were caused by a microbe.

And now that Parisian Sage, the remedy that kills the dandruff germ, is sold in every town in Canada the people of this country have awakened to the fact that dandruff is unnecessary; that falling hair and itching scalp can be quickly stopped, and that the people who use Parisian Sage will never grow bald.

To every reader of the REVIEW who wishes to eradicate offensive dandruff, stop falling hair and have an immaculately clean scalp, free from itchiness, T.G. Whitfield says he will sell Parisian Sage in a large fifty cent bottle with a guarantee to refund the money if not satisfied. It is an ideal, daintily perfumed hair dressing, free from grease and stickiness that will put life and beauty into dull faded hair and cause it to grow lustrous and luxuriant.

Hastings Awards at the National

A new Fat Stock and Poultry Show known as the National was launched this year in the city of Toronto. The exhibits in many departments were pronounced by experts to be the best ever shown in Canada. Considering the high quality of the exhibits and the keenness of the competition, Mr. James Caskey and Mr. W. E. Connor have reason to feel proud of the distinction awarded to stock either now or before owned by them.

Mr. W. E. Connor's Rocks won fifth in a class in which the owner refused an offer of $150 for a spring chicken.

In Holsteins, Cora Countess Echo, now the property of Hiram Dymen', of Dundas, but formerly owned by James Caskey, Madoc, won the grand championship ribbon for females.

A farmer met a doctor on the street, "Doc," said he, "if you are out our way this week you might as well come in and see my wife." "What ails her?" inquired the doctor. "Dunno. After getting breakfast and fixing the children for school and churning and slopping the hogs and doing a little washing, there's only seven in our family you know, she plumb declared she'd have to lie down before getting dinner. She's plumb tired out. Kic s about getting Sunday dinner." "Yes," said the wise doctor, "I'll come out and see her. It's a strange case."

SEVERE COLD ON LUNGS AND CHEST QUICKLY RELIEVED

by Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne

Mr. J. Seward, Bromptonville, Que., writes:

"Two weeks ago I took a severe cold which settled on my lungs and my chest was very sore, breathing tight and severe hacking cough. I was feeling miserable. I bought a bottle of Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne and after a few doses I felt great relief and I went into a sound sleep, a thing I was not able to do for some nights. Next day I was able to be around again, and before completing the bottle, felt as well as ever. It is a fine cough and cold cure."

Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne relieves the irritation and "stuffed-up" feeling in the air passages, soothes the tickling which makes you cough, loosens the phlegm and drives out the cold before it gets troublesome.

Permodelle

Permanent Modelling Material for Children

Modelling has become a favorite pastime, owing to its educational value, and it is therefore all-important that the material used should be satisfactory in every way.

This is the more necessary as it is largely in the hands of children, who can hardly be expected to exercise the care and discretion of their seniors.

"Permodelle" meets these requirements, and may be accepted as quite safe. It will not adhere to the hands, it will not stain, grease or soil the most delicate fabric.

The heat of the hands is sufficient to render it plastic, and when moulded it sets hard and retains the acquired shape, and permanently if desired, but can be re-softened and re-modelled any number of times.

"Permodelle" is produced in a variety of fast colors. The coloring materials, too, are quite harmless.

The qualities of "Permodelle" and, above all, its absolute safety, induce us to believe that it will acquire well-deserved and popular favor.

Boxes containing twelve colors, price 15c.

NATIONAL LIVE STOCK SHOW

High Tribute Paid to Canadian Horses—Illinois Expert Praises Live Stock Exhibition

A despatch from Toronto says: The interest in the National Live Stock Show at Exhibition Park was very great, judging from the large number of people who visited the Exhibition. The splendid quality of the horses and cattle that were shown attracted much attention, and caused favorable comment.

Mr. Robert Burgess, of Wenona, Ill., who was ont of the judges of horses, and who this year has seventy head of Percherons entered in the International Show at Chicago, said: "I had no idea that you had an institution such as this in Canada. You have some of the finest horses I have seen anywhere."

In the cattle ring the competitions in the Shorthorn class were very keen. Two of the finest lots that were shown came from the United States. One particularly fine carload was exhibited by W. F. Harding of Wisconsin, President of the American Shorthorn Breeders' Association, another carload of splendid animals came from Ohio.

Holsteins Win in Dairy Test.

In the milking test at this show the cow that scored the highest number of points over all breeds was a pure-bred Holstein, Madam R. 3rd. Alma 2nd, exhibited by W. F. Walker, Manchester. This cow gave in the three days 213.5 lbs. of milk, testing 3.5 per cent., making a total of 240.34 points. The five highest cows in the test were all Holsteins, and the sixth a Holstein grade. Seventh and eighth places were taken by Ayrshires, and ninth and tenth again by Holsteins. Among the Holsteins of the same age as the winner, the poorest one gave 219 lbs. of milk, testing only 3.0, making 220.25 points.

DIVORCES IN GERMANY.

Latest Statistics Show An Extraordinary Rise.

A despatch from Berlin says: Germany, which for some time past has been expressing alarm at the falling birth rate, has discovered a new sign of social decadence. It is the "marriage crisis." Latest statistics show an extraordinary rise in the number of divorces obtained in Germany. For instance, 15,780 divorces were obtained in 1911, or 20 per 100,000 inhabitants, against 12,180, or 20 per 100,000 in 1906. It is believed that when the next set of statistics is published a further increase in the number will be reported. What makes the marriage crisis all the worse is that while the number of divorces is rapidly increasing the number of marriages is decreasing. The number of marriages per 100,000 inhabitants in 1906 was 8,200, in 1911, 7,800.

SEQUEL TO LAKE TRAGEDY

Supposed Dead Man Turned Up Alive—"Apparition" Appears Among Mourners

A despatch from Hamilton says: Perhaps the most extraordinary incident in connection with the disaster recorded on the Great Lakes occurred here on Wednesday evening. One of the supposed victims of the marine tragedy was John Thompson, 442 John Street north, of this city. On Monday last week a telegram was received by Mr. Thompson from his daughter, Mrs. Mary Ward, of Sarnia, to the effect that his son John had gone down on the James Carruthers. Learning that the bodies of a number of the crew of the ill-fated steamship had been cast ashore at Kettle Point, near Goderich, Mr. Thomas Thompson hastened there on Monday evening to see if he could identify the remains of his son. He arrived at Goderich at midnight, and after a nerve-wracking drive he reached the place on the lake shore where the bodies had been carefully and tenderly laid away for the purpose of identification. Among the number was that of a young man which corresponded so closely to that of John Thompson that the bereaved father acknowledged it as that of his son. The only difference Mr. Thompson saw was in the color of the hair, he being of the opinion that his son's hair was lighter than that on the head of the corpse. On mentioning this fact to the undertaker in this city, the latter, who was personally acquainted with the son, said the fact that the body had been in the water so long might account for the difference. Preparations for the funeral were proceeded with. Flowers were sent by sorrowing friends and relatives, and a wake was to be held at night.

In Walked Thompson.

About six o'clock on Wednesday evening there was a knock at the door, and as no one went to answer the door opened and in walked young John Thompson, alive and well, and strode across the room to take a look at the man in the casket. The scene that ensued can be imagined. The father and sisters were simply terrified out of their wits as the apparition of the dead brother, as they believed, appeared before them. The mother was at the undertaker's at the time completing arrangements for the funeral. When quiet had been restored and the family was assured that some strange mistake had been made messengers were sent to the mother to break the news to her. It was some time before the import of the intelligence dawned on her, and there was a pathetic meeting between son and mother. In the meantime the corpse of the unknown occupied a place in the casket in the parlor of the little home. The undertaker was summoned, and he took the remains back to his chapel.

Did Not Ship on Boat.

Young Thompson's story is to this effect:—He left here on Nov. 4th, but did not go on the James Carruthers as was expected. He left here on the Merchants Mutual steamship the Maple and went to Montreal. He was there at the time of the storm, and was totally unconscious of the fears his family were suffering on his account. Tuesday he arrived in Toronto, and late that night he read in a newspaper of the finding of his body at Goderich and the preparations for his funeral. He reached Hamilton Wednesday afternoon, and on his way to the house called to see his friend, Edward Duffy, of the Northern Hotel. Mr. Duffy almost collapsed when he saw him, as he had heard of the sad happening and had made arrangements to attend the funeral.

Another remarkable coincidence in connection with this remarkable case is that there was a J. Thompson enrolled among the crew of the James A. Carruthers.

TRADE WITH JAPAN.

Coarser Kind of Flour Than the Home Brand Is In Demand.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The development of trade with Japan in flour is regarded as having strong possibilities, and Hon. G. E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, has been making a special enquiry into it. There is a good demand in the Orient for Canadian flour, but a coarser brand than what is required for the domestic trade is most popular. It is probable that arrangements will be made with Canadian millers particularly to manufacture this variety of the product.

NO ONE TO BLAME.

Inquiry Into the Wreck of the Steamer Wexford.

A despatch from Zurich, Ont., says: Coroner Campbell's jury inquiring into the wreck of the steamer Wexford, lost in the big storm on Lake Huron, decided on Thursday that no one was to blame for the tragedy, but that it was an act of Providence.

FAMILY OF FIVE

All Indulged Freely From Infancy.

It is a common thing in this country to see whole families growing up with nervous systems weakened by tea and coffee drinking.

That is because many parents do not realize that tea and coffee contain a drug — caffeine — which causes the trouble. (The same is found in tea.)

"There are five children in my family," writes a Western mother, "all of whom drank coffee from infancy up to two years ago.

"My husband and I had heart trouble and were advised to quit coffee. We did so and began to use Postum. We are doing without medicine and are entirely relieved of heart trouble.

(Caffeine causes heart trouble when continually used as in coffee drinking.)

"Our eleven-year-old boy had a weak digestion from birth, and yet always craved and was given coffee. When we changed to Postum he liked it and we gave him all he wanted. He has been restored to health by Postum and still likes it."

Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Write for the little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be boiled.

Instant Postum is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. Grocers sell [illegible]n" for Postum.

"LESS TO BE DONE."

The G.T.R. at Point St. Charles Has Reduced the Hours.

A despatch from Montreal says: Nineteen hundred men employed in the Grand Trunk shops at Point St. Charles are affected by an order issued by the company that until further notice the working hours each day will be from 7.30 a.m. until 4.30 p.m. This means a loss to each man of five hours per week. The men do not work on Saturday afternoon. The order has already gone into force. In explanation of the curtailment, the company says that the summer turn-out from the shops was of such a satisfactory character that the equipment is thoroughly up to date and there is less to be done. There was a suggestion that some of the men should be laid off for a time, but it was thought better to shorten the hours and keep all hands at work.

CHICAGO STOCK SHOW.

Judging Competition Team From Ontario.

A despatch from Guelph says: The stock-judging team to represent the Ontario Agricultural College in the stock-judging competition at the International Stock Show in Chicago the beginning of next month has been announced. They are: J. M. Brown, Peter Forsyth, A. McLaren, J. Stark, and E. Woltz; reserves: R. Ramsay and Clarke Duff.

The French Chamber of Deputies will begin the discussion of the bill, already passed by the Senate, to limit the number of bars, saloons, and other establishments for the sale of distilled spirits. The measure fixes the number of bars at 1 per 200 inhabitants, and until this figure is reached no new bars may be opened. The effect will be to gradually reduce 1,480,000 bars to 200,000.

SAMPLES WILL BE SENT FREE

Dominion Experimental Farm Issues Usual Instructions to Applicants for Grain and Potatoes

A despatch from Ottawa says: J. H. Grisdale, director of Dominion Experimental Farms, announces that by instructions of the Hon. Minister of Agriculture a distribution of superior sorts of grain and potatoes will be made during the coming winter and spring to Canadian farmers. The samples for general distribution will consist of spring wheat (5 pounds), white oats (4 pounds), barley (5 pounds), and field peas (5 pounds). These will be sent out from Ottawa. A distribution of potatoes (in 3-pound samples) will be carried on from several of the experimental farms, the Central farm at Ottawa supplying only the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. All samples will be sent free, by mail.

Applicants must give particulars in regard to the soil on their farms, and some account of their experience with such kinds of grain (or potatoes) as they have grown, so that a promising sort for their conditions may be selected.

Each application must be separate, and must be signed by the applicant. Only one sample of grain in that province, and one of potatoes can be sent to each farm. Applications an any kind of printed form cannot be accepted. If two or more samples are asked for in the same letter only one will be sent.

As the supply of seed is limited, farmers are advised to apply early; but the applications will not necessarily be filled in the exact order in which they are received. Preference will always be given to the most thoughtful and explicit requeste. Applications received after the end of January will probably be too late.

All applications for grain (and applications from the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec for potatoes) should be addressed to the Dominion cerealist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. Such applications require no postage. If otherwise addressed delay and disappointment may occur.

Applications for potatoes from farmers in any other province should be addressed (postage prepaid) to the superintendent of the nearest branch Experimental Farm

BOWSER PLOWS.

Sees Exercise Behind a Yoke of Fiery Oxen.

A THRILLING EXPERIENCE.

Everything Goes Along Smoothly Until His Plow Strikes a Snag and a Runaway Ensues—Bowser Gets No Sympathy.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

NOTWITHSTANDING the disaster attending his efforts with the scythe at the Green farm, as already recorded, Mr. Bowser was anxious to go out for another Sunday, and Mrs. Bowser had no serious objections to offer.

They were eating their country Sunday breakfast when a farmer made his appearance with a yoke of oxen and a plow.

"Why, what does this mean?" asked Mrs. Bowser as she caught sight of the outfit.

"Oh, just a little exercise," replied Mr. Bowser.

"But it's Sunday."

"They don't keep Sunday in the country, you know."

"But it's not the season to plow."

"I am going to do a little plowing, Mrs. Bowser, and I don't know that the time of year has anything to do with it. I want to get this yard in shape and have some needed exercise at the same time."

"But when did you ever plow?"

"Before you cut your eyeteeth."

"And you can manage oxen?"

"I used to plow with five yoke of oxen ahead of the plow, and I guess I can manage one pair. You just keep out of my way and I'll rip up the clay around here in a way to astonish the natives. The gamboling farmer will now go forth to hold the warbling plow and manage the patient ox."

Farmer Proffers Aid.

"Look here, naybur," said the farmer as Mr. Bowser went out to him,

MR. BOWSER WAS PLAYING CIRCUS.

"shan't I do this bit o' work fur you? Mebbe you ain't used to oxen and plows."

"I was driving oxen and holding plows when I was six years old," replied Mr. Bowser with his usual modesty.

"Oh, you was? Then you must know all about 'em. What you want is the exercise, eh?"

"That's it. I came out here to work off about thirty pounds of fat and get a healthy color. Yelling at the oxen will also strengthen my voice. If you'll send a boy up in about half an hour he can take the outfit home."

"If you plow all this yard in half an hour you'll beat the hull caboodle of us," said the farmer as he looked the ground over. "Waal, I'll send a boy after the critters about sundown. Of course you know all about 'haw' and 'gee?'"

"My dear man," smiled Mr. Bowser, "I used the words before I had cut six teeth, and you needn't worry in the slightest. Drop over this evening and see if you can find any fault with my work."

When the neighbor had gone Mrs Bowser came out and said:

"If you'll wait until I hunt up an old dress I'll drive the oxen for you."

"Never you mind about driving any oxen for me," he replied as he removed his coat and vest. "If I had as many dollars as acres of ground I've plowed with oxen we'd go to Europe this fall. Who'd a thought two months ago that we'd be out here in the country today turning up the golden soil and bathing in the glorious sunshine! Say, what a painting that landscape would make down there across the meadow!"

"Y-e-s," replied Mrs. Bowser as her eyes took in an old straw stack, two rail fences and a cornfield gone to weeds.

Bowser Goes It Alone.

"And the merry hearted plowman is now ready to plow. If you don't want to be buried under the mellow soil you'd better stand back. These oxen look to me to be a little frisky, and when we start we may go eighteen times around the yard without stopping. All ready now—haw over—gee up!"

Mr. Bowser flourished the gad about his head and brought it down on the backs of the waiting oxen to start off with enthusiasm. They started. No fault could be found with their enthusiasm. He dropped the gad and seized the plow handles, and the next minute the oxen were on the run for the opposite fence and Mr. Bowser was playing circus behind them. Sometimes he was on one foot, sometimes a two. Sometimes he bounded into the air like a high jumper; sometimes he seemed to be sailing after the plow, which ripped through the grass and did not enter the soil at all. When the oxen brought up against the fence with a crash Mr. Bowser was flung to the left into a patch of pigweeds, and he lay there blinking at the sun when Mrs. Bowser came up and said:

"I thought you knew all about plowing and driving oxen."

"And why don't I?" he shouted as he got up with the few hairs on his head standing on end. "You've got to strike out a furrow before you can plow, haven't you? I was simply getting a start. I told you these oxen looked frisky, but I'll tame 'em down after a bit."

Mrs. B. Offers a Suggestion.

"Hadn't you better let the man do the plowing, and you can follow on behind and pick up the stones and sods?"

"Never! What am I out here on a farm for? What did I get this plow for? You just keep away and I'll be all right. The oxen are probably afraid of you, and that's the reason they started off as they did."

"But you might have been killed," she persisted as she started for the house.

"Yes, and I might have spread my wings and sailed away to heaven!" he retorted. And then to the oxen:

"You go on! Now, then, haw around here and gee up. That's the way. Tell me the merry, merry plowman can't plow, will you?"

The oxen started off at a gentle pace this time, but going where they pleased, and Mr. Bowser followed after. Sometimes he dug the point of the plow into the hard soil; sometimes the handles were down in the grass and the point in the air. He was "ripping things," however, and was well pleased for about two minutes. Then he made a sudden lunge on the handles, the plow struck a rock, and as he went into the air the oxen whirled about and ran over everything behind and brought up in a fence corner. Mrs. Bowser, who was looking on from the back steps, had just reached the scene and was hunting in the grass for Mr Bowser's body when the farmer who owned the outfit came up and said:

"I kinder guessed he didn't know anything about plowing, and so I was hidin' down thar behind the fence to be at hand. He's had the wind knocked out o' him, but I guess he's all right. Let's drag him up by the back door."

Bowser Comes To.

It was half an hour before Mr Bowser sat up on the grass and looked about him. The man was plowing the yard, and Mrs. Bowser had the camphor bottle at his nose.

"Well," said she, "the merry, merry plowman has held the warbling plow."

"I—I understand," he replied as he transfixed her with his glare. "Just as I got started you threw a rail at the oxen and hoped and expected I'd become a mangled corpse! I'll—I'll see you later!"

"You needn't feel bad about it, naybur," said the farmer in a consoling voice as he came and bent over the warbling plowman. "These 'ere oxen have killed three different hired men for me, and if you'd been flung about a foot further you'd have struck a stun and been mashed up like a pumpkin. You'd better stick to bluffin' and let plowing alone!"

THE CUCKOOS VINDICATED.

One Slander About Their Being Bad Parents Disproved.

It has been asserted many times that cuckoos are exceedingly bad parents, but investigation does not prove this. As is well known, the cuckoo of various species intrusts the hatching of its eggs and the rearing of its young to other birds. Despite this it is authoritatively declared that both parents continue to be interested in their eggs and spead their time in their neighborhood until the young birds have their feathers. The hen cuckoo watches the bird in whose nest she proposes that the usurper shall be reared until it has started sitting. She then takes her own egg from the ground into her claws and flies to the chosen nest. From this she drives the legitimate owner, who, in the attempt to defend its property, occasionally causes the cuckoo to let fall its egg. Nine times out of ten, however, the intruder contrives to put its precious burden into the nest, and to make room for it by pushing out one or two of the other eggs.

In due course the evicted bird returns to the nest and, not suspecting the substitution which has taken place, sits. Meantime the cuckoo billets her other eggs — sometimes as many as five—on other birds in the neighborhood, never putting more than one egg in each nest, as she knows full well that if two of her youngsters were together they would injure each other. When two cuckoo's eggs are found in the same nest it is certain that they have been left there by two hen cuckoos. Each day the cuckoos visit the various nests containing their eggs.

The hatching of the cuckoo's eggs takes from 12 to 13 days and the young bird is scarcely out of the shell when it is making ferocious demands for food. For two days it is helpless, but on the third day is extraordinarily active. As soon as it is able to do so it pushes the other eggs out of the nest. Should these eggs have been hatched it forces itself under the young birds and by flapping its wings flings them out. Then, having the nest to itself, it clamors for an enormous quantity of food, with which the parents of its adoption supply it unstintingly.

When the nest grows too small for it the young cuckoo rests on a branch, still clamoring for food. So it continues until it is ready to take flight to other climes. Such is the watchfulness of the parent cuckoos that they are in attendance in the neighborhood of the nests while their youngsters are hatching out and remain on guard until those youngsters have got their feathers. The parent birds always return to the same place at the time of mating and try to find the birds which hatched their eggs during previous seasons.

The Claw of the Devil.

In the middle ages people recognized witches and possessed persons by seeking on their bodies for what was called the claw of the devil. It was a more or less extensive part of the skin in which the subject was insensible to any touch or prick. The expert intrusted with this work would close the eyes of the subject and, armed with a sharp needle, prick here and there the different parts of the body. The sufferer was to answer with a cry to each prick, and the claw of the devil on a certain spot was recognized from the fact that he did not cry when this spot was examined.—From "The Major Symptoms of Hysteria," by Pierre Janet.

Finding a Grave With an Egg.

The Miautsze, a little known tribe in Asia, are very superstitious about death and will not bury a man until they have first tested the ground with an egg. This operation is very curious. While the body is being prepared for burial a number of Miautsze, including the male relatives of the deceased, go out to the appointed spot bearing a large basket of eggs. Stooping down, one of the natives lets an egg drop softly on the ground. If it breaks it is considered an ill omen, and another spot is selected. In this way the party often wander for hours, breaking eggs over the ground until they finally strike a place where the shell does not crack.

Moslem Prayer Rugs.

Prayer rugs were evidently invented for the purpose of providing the worshipers with one absolutely clean place on which to offer prayers. It is not lawful of a Moslem to pray on any place not perfectly clean, and unless each one has his own special rug he is not certain that the spot has not been polluted. It does not matter to these followers of Mohammed how unclean a rug that is on the floor may be, because over it they place the prayer rug when their devotions begin.

Sarcastic Papa.

"I don't think your father feels very kindly toward me," said Mr. Staylate.

"You misjudge him. The morning after you called on me he seemed quite worried for fear I had not treated you with proper courtesy."

"Indeed! What did he say?"

"He asked me how I could be so rude as to let you go away without your breakfast."

A Celtic Isle.

The smallest dependency of France is the Ile d'Hoedic, situated at the east of Belle Isle. Its population is less than 250. The people do not speak French, but Celtic. Fishing is the principal industry, and all the inhabitants are provided with food at an inn managed by the women. The town has no streets. The houses are mostly of mud.

Enlarging the Supply.

He—I see that there were but 5,080 words in the English language in Shakespeare's time. Now there are 450,000. She—Well, just think how many more people there are who speak English.

Values.

The value of a piece of land is the number of footsteps passing by it in twenty-four hours. The value of a railroad is the number of people near it who cannot keep still.

A chicken never should be eaten the day it is killed. The tenderest fresh killed chicken will be tough immediately after the animal heat has left the body. In about twelve hours, however, the muscles will relax and it then becomes acceptable for food.

New Premises New Stock New Prices

Our ever-increasing trade has compelled us to secure more commodious quarters. We have now opened our new store, 3 floors 24x85 ft., over 6000 ft. floor space, packed with Furniture of every description. We have been planning for this change for months, and have purposely allowed our old stock to run nearly completely out, and are now opening with a practically new stock.

By making a careful study of Furniture conditions and buying when and where the prices were right we have got together the very best value in Furniture ever offered to the buying public in Ontario. We have also rearranged our Price List, and we purpose to give our customers better prices than can be secured at any of the towns or cities of the Province. Remember our old motto, "We will Not Be Undersold."

We beg to sincerely thank our many customers for their very liberal patronage in the past, and trust by fair dealing and right prices to merit a continuance of the same.

TO OUR DISTANT CUSTOMERS

We wish to say we are better than ever prepared to cater to your Furniture needs, and have completed arrangements whereby we can ship direct from the manufacturer to your nearest railway station, freight prepaid. Write, telephone or wire, and we will guarantee satisfaction.

We expect in the very near future to issue a most complete and up-to-date catalogue, giving full description and prices of all Furniture in stock.
